Hard on Stock Gamblers.
Another Prodigy Aged 14.
Gold Goes to France.
Providence in China.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

STOCK GAMBLING in dull, uncertain times is most annoying to gamblers. They never can be quite sure.

Wall street heard of the drought, and wise bulls said, "That will kill grain crops, and with less wheat and corn, prices will go up. The low price of wheat has held stocks down. Let us buy stocks and they will go up with wheat."

THEY BOUGHT stocks and they did NOT go up, when wheat and corn went up.

THE BEARS said, "This is our opportunity. We sympathize with the suffering public, especially the farmer. When drought kills crops, that will injure all the people, and stocks will go down. This is the time to sell them."

Stock gambling is very wearing, except for bull times, and for bears in panics. Then it is "like taking candy from a sick child."

A BOY 14 years old enters Harvard College this fall. His father is a German chemist, his mother an American graduate of Radcliffe. Youthful prodigies of yesteryear are rarely conspicuous 20 years later.

Perhaps too much education is the trouble. Four or five years at Harvard College may be the best possible thing for a promising boy of 14.

On the other hand three years in the Northwest wood, without a book, might be better than five college years. "Es bildet ein talent sich in der stille." "Talent is built in solitude" does not mean Harvard.

THOSE THAT sympathized with France, wondering how she would recuperate from fearful war losses, will rejoice to hear that the principal worry in France now is what to do with the gold pouring in.

French newspapers call it "glut of gold," and say something must be done about it.

Last week the French gold supply increased thirty millions, bringing the total gold reserve in the Bank of France to one billion eight hundred and forty million dollars.

DAY BEFORE yesterday 346 barrels of gold arrived in Paris from New York, worth $13,000,000.

The French are an intelligent, efficient people, in war and peace. Our bankers might learn something by visiting them.

GOLD PUZZLES even wise gentlemen that manage finance in the United States.

After the business slump in 1920, the United States drew from Europe and other sources $644,000,000 in gold, in what was called a "deflation crash."

Now in another "deflation crash" we send $67,000,000 in gold to other countries in five weeks.

We don't know why we gathered in the $644,000,000 in 1920 or why we have lost the $67,000,000 in the last five weeks.

THE MYSTERIOUS ways of Providence are recalled as you reflect on the overwhelming population of Asia, China especially, and then on the Chinese war.

Of 20,000 Huanese troops in one China fighting unit, "more than half are boys 14 to 16 years old, only 25 per cent have rifles, the others carrying spears and swords for beheading prisoners."

When war, brigandage and famine bring to the battle fields boys of 14 armed with beheading swords, you know that Providence, or something, is attending temporarily to the Asiatic population problem.

IMPORTATION OF KING CAROL, persuaded to trade a charming lady for a Balkan throne, has not helped the condition of unfortunate Jews in Rumania.

Constant anti-Semitic outbreaks are reported, the latest telling of Rumanian "students" boarding trains and beating Jewish passengers. The outrages are stimulated by distribution of printed matter, urging attacks on Jews as responsible for all misfortune, from too much rain to drought.

VARIOUS RUMANIAN organizations are formed for the purpose of Jew-baiting. One is called "The Iron Guard" another "The Archangel Michael Student Organization." Its namesake would not be proud of it.

The League of Nations tries to have the anti-Semitic organizations suppressed without success.

Some plan is needed. It costs less to ship goods across the Atlantic Ocean than to deliver them after they reach New York. This writer sent from Los Angeles a carload of furniture of mahogany grown in the Philippines. It cost less to ship the furniture from the Los Angeles factory to the harbor, down the coast, through the Panama Canal and up to New York than it did to send it from the New York dock to destination.

U. S. FIGHTS DROUGHT GOUGE

Hoover Takes Lead in Drive Both to Devise Farm Relief And to Protect Consumers

By WILLIAM S. NEAL,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The Hoover administration will lead a campaign for relief of millions of drought-stricken farmers and at the same time stands ready to combat profiteering in foodstuffs in the great industrial centers of the nation.

This assurance was given today as official and private agencies continued investigations to aid the President in formulating a definite relief plan at a conference with 12 governors next Thursday.

Despite the seriousness of the drought, both the President and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde have declared the bulk of the nation's food crop is safe.

TO FIGHT GOUGERS

Exaggerated reports of a near-famine in dairy products and canned goods already have paved the way for profiteering, it is declared. The Administration is believed to be ready to invoke the powers of the Department of Jus-

GUARD TOWN FOLLOWING LYNCHINGS

International News Service.

MARION, Ind., Aug. 9.—Two companies of the Indiana National Guard detrained here shortly after dawn today and were immediately placed on duty patrolling the Negro quarters of the city.

The troops were rushed to Marion to prevent a possible recurrence of the mob violence which on Thursday night resulted in the lynching of two Negroes accused of attacking a white girl and murdering her escort.

The arrival of the guardsmen gave the town a war-like aspect as the columns marched from their special train to quarters assigned to them in the Civic Hall. Details were immediately posted in the more dangerous areas.

The soldiers, members of Company I, of South Bend, commanded by Capt. Robert F. Durbin, and Company K, of Fort Wayne, under the command of Capt. John F. Houck, had been at Camp Knox, Ky., for their summer encampment. They were taken in trucks to Louisville and there boarded a train for Marion.

200 NEGROES FLEE

During the night, 200 Negro men and women left Marion for the small settlement of Weaver, Ind., about seven miles distant, evidently fearing further outbreaks of violence.

The National Guardsmen were requested by Mayor Jack Edwards, the town's youthful mayor—he is only 28—when Negro leaders advised him that trouble might be expected. O. O. Chasey, secretary to Gov. Harry G. Leslie, at first refused to send the troops, but later complied with Mayor

SENTENCED TO DEATH!

IRENE SCHROEDER

Blonde Irene, the Trigger Woman, today refused a motion for a new trial and sentenced with Glenn Dague to die in Pennsylvania's electric chair for the slaying of a state highway patrolman.

DEATH PENALTY IMPOSED ON PAIR FOR SLAYING HIGHWAY OFFICER

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 9.—(INS.) Irene Schroeder and her sweetheart W. Glenn Dague, were sentenced to die in the electric chair by Judge R. L. Hildebrand in Criminal Court today after he refused their motion for a new trial in the slaying of Corp. Brady Paul, of the State Highway Patrol.

Gov. John S. Fisher is expected to set the date of execution in the near future.

Defense attorneys, it was reported, may carry their fight to save the pair to the Supreme Court by filing a "plea in poverty" in behalf of the blonde and Dague.

The two were found guilty of first degree murder and recommended for the death penalty in separate trials last spring after they had been captured by a posse on the Pima Indian reservation in Arizona, January 14, in a gun battle.

A desperate attempt was made by defense counsel for the blonde trigger woman to have her acquitted on the ground that she was actuated by an irresistible impulse and was not to be held responsible for the death of the state trooper.

DAGUE'S DEFENSE

Dague put up the defense that the shooting of Paul was presumably done by a fellow officer.

A new trial was asked on the ground that the court had erred in refusing to admit testimony of the "irresistible impulse" in behalf of the blonde and numerous other rulings which it was held deprived the accused woman of her legal rights.

Irene was placed on trial March 10, with Special Prosecutor Charles J. Margiotti in charge of the commonwealth's case.

JOCKEY KILLED BY TRAIN

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Leonard Madden, 26, well-known jockey, was killed last night by a fast passenger train as he was trying to push his stalled automobile off the track.

MORE SHOWERS EXPECTED

More showers were expected over the week end—showers that may bring an end to the six-week drought which has been causing serious damage throughout the country.

Yesterday's showers, while they brought slight relief to residents, did little toward reviving crops.

When the first shower arrived yesterday, shortly after noon, the temperature dropped 10 degrees

LINDYS TO FLY WITHOUT BABY

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., Aug. 9.—(INS.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh were scheduled to fly today to the Morrow estate in Maine. The flight was revealed when Mrs. Lindbergh's new three-seated biplane, was ordered in readiness at the Long Island Aviation Country Club at Hicksville, L. I.

It was understood their son, Charles, Jr., would not accompany the Lindberghs in the plane.

The plane was given a test flight at Roosevelt Field, N. Y., and was to be brought to Hicksville this afternoon for the Maine trip, it was understood.

Lady Heath Sails For Europe, Africa

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—Lady Mary Heath, noted British aviatrix, sailed today for a visit in Europe. Later, she will go to Africa.

She was accompanied by her nurse-companion, Miss Florence Madden, who recently petitioned in the Ohio courts that a guardian be appointed for Lady Heath because she was "incompetent" to manage her affairs, as a result of injuries suffered in a crash at Cleveland.

The English flier said the court proceedings had been "waived" and that the charges were "ridiculous." She declared Miss Madden was accompanying her as a guest

Character Real Life Standard, Says Coolidge

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug. 9.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Because of an endless struggle against the elements for the necessities of existence, it is natural to place great emphasis on material prosperity. While that attitude is proper and wise, we still should keep in mind that wealth is not an end but a means. We need it only for the use we can make of it. The real standard of life is not one of quantity but of quality; not of money, but of character.

Calvin Coolidge.

Some day a sufficient organization, balancing productive output and consumptive need, will give us economic emancipation. But we have not yet perfected the formula. To blame the government or business for all present imperfections is like blaming Washington for lacking railroads, or Lincoln for ignoring aviation. Meantime we must live and learn. If we have unemployment, it must be remedied; if we have destitution, it must be relieved.

But the great realities do not depend upon prosperity. Getting a living is not the most important part of life. We can be just as devoted to our home, just as faithful to our religion, without great earthly possessions. Even in charity, the widow's mite still outranks the greatest foundations of the merchant princes.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

CITIZENS TO GET COUNTY WORK

Every successful bidder for Allegheny County's business in the future must agree to employ native born or naturalized citizens of Allegheny County, County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong offered a resolution at the commissioners' meeting yesterday afternoon providing that a clause be inserted in all future contracts barring all but Allegheny County citizens from being employed as laborers on public works contracts.

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern offered an amendment providing a "uniform 50-cents-an-hour rate the county pays its laborers." McGovern said:

His amendment failed to get a second from either of the majority commissioners. He voted "aye" on the Armstrong resolution with Commissioner E. V. Babcock.

Armstrong explained that the resolution was drafted after he "had been waited upon by the Building Trades Council committee."

Guyasuta Business Goes To Dogs, Track Shut

Although a few touts and tinhorn gamblers waited for several hours, hoping against hope, the Guyasuta Kennel Club's race track on the Freeport road remained dark last night. Business seemed to have gone to the bow-wows.

Here and there among the small gathering flitted a few gentlemen wearing tin stars under their coats, looking for "violations of the gambling laws," perhaps, not to mention reporters, but there was no activity. And after a time the crowd melted away and all was serene on Freeport road.

COMMISSIONERS TO INVESTIGATE AIRPORT 'BLUNDER'

QUIZ AWAITS ARMSTRONG SUMMONS

McGovern's Plea for Special Meeting Granted, but No Fund Set to Pay Counsel

The county airport and the Allegheny River boulevard, which County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern has charged to be colossal engineering blunders, will be investigated at a special meeting of the county commissioners to be held soon.

These two matters, which came to public notice during County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong's three weeks' absence from the city, were expected to be taken up at yesterday's meeting. Nothing was said about either until after three hours of clearing up routine work when Commissioner Armstrong moved that the meeting adjourn.

COUNSEL PLEA FAILS

"Before we do I want the chair to set the time for a special meeting to hear conditions surrounding the airport and the Allegheny River boulevard," declared McGovern.

"The chair will be pleased to set the time for such a hearing," Armstrong said and started to leave.

McGovern continued:

"I want you to consider a motion from me to set up $1,000 for special counsel to represent me when this meeting is held. I have no counsel and no access to these matters such as the majority commissioners have. I want to——"

"Do I hear a second to the motion?" Armstrong's voice boomed out.

And when there was no reply Armstrong repeated the ritual that so often has relegated McGovern's motions to the limbo of motions:

"There being no second, there is nothing before the board."

BUNGLING CHARGED

This concluded the meeting and the possibility of the airport being aired until Armstrong calls the special meeting for that purpose.

McGovern has charged that the airport job has been bungled and that the Allegheny River boulevard was started without taking into consideration the plant of the Pennsylvania Water Company. The boulevard was built up to the water plant, but construction was stopped by the plant. Work was started on the other side of the plant. Some changes, which will require moving the water plant out into the river, must be made, it has been learned, or the boulevard relocated. If this is done the probable cost for the work will approximate $500,000, it is said.

THEFT SUSPECT SHOT, CAUGHT

An alleged robber was shot in the nose this morning when he and a companion were trying to escape, police report.

Edward Accettula, 24, of 987 Burtee street, was shot by Motorcycle Patrolman James O'Donnell when O'Donnell and Motorcycle Patrolman Joseph Thompson detected, they say, Accettula and a companion running from a chain store at 612 Larimer avenue. The companion escaped.

Fighting to save $1.75, John McLaughlin, 24, of 1208 Gibbons street, was shot in the left leg and hurled from a taxicab by two Negroes early today. He was found in Lombard street and removed to Mercy Hospital. A second shot fired by the robbers grazed his right shoulder.

McLaughlin said the robbers took the dollar but he saved the seventy-five cents.

Marriage Reveals Poconos' Romance

TOBYHANNA, Pa., Aug. 9.—A "romance of the Poconos" came to light today with the announcement of the marriage of Lieut Malcolm S. Eakin, 176th Field Artillery, second battalion staff officer, who has been a guest of the 107th Field Artillery since his own outfit left camp last week, to Miss Katherine McKay, of New York City. The couple was married secretly in Stroudsburg yesterday and motored to New York for their honeymoon. Lieut. and Mrs. Eakin will take up their residence in Pittsburgh.

COUNTY LINKS READY SOON, SAYS RIIS

McGovern Seeks to Know Date, Charges Evasion When No Time Is Set

"When will the county park golf courses be finished?" a question that he asks at least once a year, was again propounded by County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, questioning Paul B. Riis, director of parks, at the commissioners' meeting yesterday. Riis replied:

"Just as soon as we can."

"That's an evasive answer," declared McGovern.

"No, it is not. The South Park course is finished and the North Park course will be completed as soon as we can do it," Riis answered.

The question came when Riis told the commissioners he needs an additional five and a half acres in North Park to permit relocation of the Kummer road bisecting part of the course near the No. 3 hole. He explained that the people who own the land don't want to sell, and it may be necessary to condemn the land.

McGOVERN OPPOSES

When a motion was put by Commissioner E. V. Babcock to authorize Riis to negotiate for the land, McGovern said:

"I'd like to be recorded as voting no. This park business is a luxury. I am opposed to granting authority for negotiations that might get us into court like we did with the airport. We should deal privately for it."

Commissioner Babcock said:

"That's practically what my motion means, to deal privately for it."

"You paid out $100,000 to private individuals to negotiate for the park lands, McGovern said.

SAVING CLAIMED

"And saved money by it," retorted Babcock.

"Yes, he saved half a million dollars for the county by being smart enough to do it," remarked Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong.

WANTS STANDS OPEN

A matter that Armstrong is going to decide soon is the question of why the barbecue stands and refreshment stands in the county parks have not been opened this year.

McGovern brought the matter up while Parks Director Riis was before the board.

"Why haven't the settlers' tents and barbecue stands been opened in the parks this year?" McGovern asked Riis.

QUIZZES ARMSTRONG

"I don't know anything about it," Riis answered.

"What do you know about it, Mr. Chairman?" McGovern asked Armstrong. "Why is it that the summer is practically gone without giving the public the use of these expensive barbecues they paid for?"

"I expect to look into it and have it before the board soon," Armstrong answered.

LINDY SEES OCEAN AIR SERVICE

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, in a world-wide radio broadcast last night, predicted establishment of regular trans-oceanic air routes in the next few years.

He urged also adoption of an international code of uniform flying laws as an aid to intercontinental air communication, and added:

"The conquest of the air should bring with it a new era of international commerce and agreement."

"NEEDED BY CIVILIZATION"

Asserting that progress of civilization has been dependent on development of transportation, Lindbergh said:

"The twentieth century brings a third dimension in transportation. The last few years have seen extension of airlines over every continent. The next few will bring trans-oceanic routes to unite these continental services into a network covering the entire world.

"To realize the full significance of this development, however, it must be considered as part of the whole system of modern transportation, for unless some radical scientific discovery revolutionizes our present aircraft we cannot compete with ships and railroads in movement of most articles of commerce.

"CLOSER CONTACT"

"The airplane augments rather than replaces ground transport. Its mission is simple intercourse between countries by rapid transportation of passengers; to bring us in closer contact with other people, and to facilitate the negotiations necessary for mutual understanding and trade.

"Possibly the most important effect of aviation will be on international relations. When measured in hours of flying time, the great distances of the Old World no longer exist. Nations and races are not separated by traditional obstacles of earthbound travel."

FIGHT GOUGERS IN DROUGHT

tice to halt profiteering, if necessary.

Mr. Hoover's relief proposal, still subject to change when more accurate information is received, places the responsibility for aid in the drought-stricken sections primarily upon the business men and farmers of those states and areas.

Although the Federal Farm Board and intermediate credit banks are ready to loan funds to purchase feed for starving livestock, the requirement that good security must be obtained has restricted the government's power to aid.

In calling the governors to Washington, Mr. Hoover made it plain that local and state organizations must be formed to prevent actual suffering.

FUNDS FIRST NEED

Advance of funds to farmers to purchase feed is to be the first major effort. Voluntary contributions and the American Red Cross may be relied upon to prevent actual suffering.

"The question of human suffering has not yet arrived," he added.

Detailed reports on the drought from county agents will be laid before the President's conference of governors. Those invited are from Missouri, Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Montana, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska. Others may be added.

The shortage of feed crops, according to the Agriculture Department's report, is most acute in Southeastern Missouri, Northern Arkansas, Southern Illinois, Southern Indiana, Southern Ohio, Kentucky, Northern West Virginia and Northern Virginia, with spots of less dimensions in Montana, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

STOCK SACRIFICED

The great problem facing the administration is to see that farmers obtain enough feed to hold their livestock. Already livestock markets are crowded with a poor grade of animals, being sacrificed by farmers without sufficient feed.

There may be actual suffering in some localities, but these will be more limited, according to the department.

The outlook late in July, according to Secretary Hyde, is for production of about 90 per cent of an average crop of feed grains—corn, oats, barley and grain sorghum, and about 85 per cent of hay.

"For the country as a whole prospective feed supply at this date, considered by itself, does not appear to be particularly alarming, but is critical in certain areas," said Hyde's report.

Drought Closes 2 Banks in Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Prolonged drought today was held responsible for the failure of two banks in widely separated sections of Arkansas.

The Bank of Moratio, in Southwest Arkansas, capitalized at $35,000, and the Bank of Cove, capitalized at $10,000 and with $75,000 in deposits, passed into the hands of the State Banking Department.

Allegheny at Low Stage of 30 Years

FRANKLIN, Pa., Aug. 9.—The Allegheny River is at the lowest stage in 30 years, or as long as the measurements have been taken, Observer R. A. Fergus had to make extensions to his recording instruments this week, when he found the river two-tenths of a foot below normal, the previous low. The mark has been recorded now for four consecutive days.

Water Saving Asked, But More Is Used

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 8.—Although what threatens to become one of the most serious water shortages in the town's history exists here, residents of Waynesburg have increased their daily consumption of water since a request for its conservation was made several days ago by water company officials, records of the company show.

Give Up Showers To Protect Greens

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 9.—The golf greens at the Greensburg Country Club are more important than showers for perspiring bathers, so an order has gone out to shut off the showers to conserve the water supply.

The local club has its own water supply and the greens are still being kept alive.

Philadelphia Elks To Ask Receiver

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Philadelphia Lodge No. 2, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in United States District Court. The lodge will ask that Henry J. A. Newton, secretary of the lodge, be named receiver. Financial obligations incurred in erection of the new building it now occupies was held responsible.

within two hours. After the rain, however, the temperature rose again. At 6 o'clock last night the second rain occurred. It also lasted only a short time.

Water shortages were reported in many other towns yesterday to State Health Department employes, who are arranging emergency supplies. In many cases the water is being piped into the towns, and in others it is being hauled in tanks.

Only a few brush fires were reported, the day being only slightly busier than ordinarily for the firemen.

Glass Warehouse Contract Awarded

The Austin Company has been awarded a contract for the construction of a large warehouse in Island avenue, McKees Rocks, at a cost of approximately $100,000. The warehouse is to be erected for the Capstan Glass Company, of Connellsville. It will be a one-story building of steel frame construction, designed to care for peak production.

CITY HALTS BIG WATER WASTE

More than $300,000 in wasted water has been saved the city as a result of a survey on the South Side, just completed by the Bureau of Water.

Figures show that in all 181 underground leaks, where large losses were apparent, have been detected by a Pitometer. All have been repaired, saving water daily to the extent of 1,843,000 gallons. The survey, including with the South Side the high area supplied by the Allentown tanks, was started last spring.

Savings of 2,489,000 gallons daily, according to the bureau's report, have been made by repairs made following the survey. The report says:

"At 20 cents a thousand gallons, the rate charged for metered service, the daily saving is $866.40, or $316,236 annually."

The survey was conducted at a total cost to the city of $26,000, of which the Pitometer Company, New York, received $12,000. The Bureau of Water received $14,000 for labor and materials.

Nine Arrests Made On Dry Law Charges

Edwards' request. The Governor, who is said to be in Canada, could not be reached.

Prosecuting Attorney H. F. Hardin declared that he would place evidence before the September grand jury regarding the actions of a mob numbering some 2,000 persons which stormed the Grant County Jail, overpowered the keepers, and lynched Thomas Shipp, 19, and Abraham Smith, 18, Negroes, who had confessed to attacking Miss Mary Ball, a white girl, after murdering her escort, Claude Deeter, 23.

Deputy Attorneys General Stroup and Wall conferred with Hardin, and it is understood they discussed the advisability of calling a court of inquiry, a legal procedure rarely resorted to. Such a court could obtain immediate testimony for use later before the grand jury.

CROWDS VIEW VICTIMS

The bodies of the two lynching victims remained suspended throughout most of yesterday from the tree on which they were hung. Throngs of curious viewed them, and when they had been cut down and sent to Muncie, Ind., bits of the rope were eagerly sought as souvenirs.

A third Negro, Robert Sullivan, was taken from the jail and badly beaten, but was spared by the mob upon the urging of Miss Ball's uncle. It is understood he was mistaken for Herbert Cameron, a Negro arrested with Shipp and Smith.

Warnings that further trouble was possible were given to Mayor Edwards by the Rev. William Oglesby and Dr. W. T. Bailey, outstanding Negro citizens of Marion and members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Sheriff Jacob Campbell, who was in charge of defending the jail and its prisoners, yesterday assumed full responsibility for not using firearms or streams of water to disperse the mob.

"I did not want to harm women and children, of whom there were plenty in the mob."

FRANKLIN, Pa., Aug. 9.—The Chicago Pneumatic Tool Company's plant here has received an order for 19 large gas engines. Several hundred men will return to work Monday.

BLONDE, DAGUE GET CHAIR

Butler-New Castle road last December 27, the subsequent flight of Irene and Dague through the Middle West, their escape from Arizona deputies, one of whom was fatally wounded, and finally their capture by deputies and Indians in picturesque wild west fashion in a mountain fastness.

The blonde was convicted by the jury of 10 men and two women on the third ballot. She accepted the verdict with a snarl on her lips.

WANTS NO SYMPATHY

To her relatives who sobbed as the blonde's doom was announced by the jury foreman, she snapped:

"Shut up, you fools, I don't want your sympathy."

Impassioned pleas for mercy by the former Wheeling waitress' counsel failed to impress the jury.

Margiotti portrayed her as a cold, deliberate killer who had used her 4-year-old son Donnie to shield herself and Dague from suspicion in their career of crime.

DAGUE LOSES HEART

Dague followed Irene on trial for his life and met a like fate. His trial lacked the intense interest that had centered around the woman. He apparently had lost heart, as his attorneys fought hopelessly against the overwhelming mass of evidence skillfully adduced by the prosecution. He, too, was quickly convicted by the jury.

Dague and Irene since have awaited in the Lawrence County jail the outcome of their legal fight for a new trial, which ended today in their defeat and sentence to death.

Drought Study, Birthday Mark Hoover Outing

ORANGE, Va., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Recreation occupied a smaller space than usual today in President Hoover's week-end program as he gave his attention to the problems of drought relief.

This mountain camp on the Rapidan River bore signs of the lengthy dry spell which has afflicted the country. A flower garden which Mrs. Hoover had planted and tended was found today brown and seared.

A large party of guests which accompanied the President and Mrs. Hoover devoted itself to the usual pastimes of the camp—horseback riding, hiking and indoor games.

Tomorrow will be marked by the celebration in quiet fashion of Mr Hoover's fifty-sixth birthday.

Beautiful Babies Sought For Cup Awards Here

Where are those beautiful babies?

Is there one in your home? Maybe there are two?

The search has started. The Sun-Telegraph in conjunction with the Kroger Stores has inaugurated the quest for Pittsburgh's most beautiful children. They are to be assembled at Kennywood Park, Thursday, August 23, where the Kroger Stores will hold its annual picnic.

Special arrangements will be made by the management of the Kroger Stores, Kennywood Park and the Sun-Telegraph to receive these beautiful babies at the park that day. An efficient and impartial board of judges will be on hand and the prettiest babies selected will each be awarded a glorious silver cup or a baby beauty medal.

There will be classes for boys and girls and prizes for the three winners in each class. One class will be for infants, one year of age and under. There will be another class for children from one to three years of age, and still another for children from three to five years of age.

No, the twins will not be overlooked. There will be special prizes for the most beautiful twins, and if triplets appear—within the specified ages—they will be also rewarded. Entries will be accepted from all sections of Pittsburgh.

It is a well known fact that Pittsburgh has plenty of pretty children. You undoubtedly have one or more in your own home. Perhaps it will be a prize winner, and if it does win one of the beautiful cups the Sun-Telegraph and Kroger Stores are to award at this unique baby contest, you will be proud of the award.

Watch the Sun-Telegraph for complete instructions on how to enter your baby in the Sun-Telegraph-Kroger Stores beauty contest.

Judge Sabath to Assume Solomon Role in Baby Mixup

COURT TEST SET FOR MONDAY

Jurist Famed for Domestic Adjustments Takes Hand On Plea of Watkins Pair

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—With the Watkins-Bamberger baby mixup again a live issue, Judge Joseph Sabath, noted for his skill in settling marital disputes, was called upon today to assume the role of Solomon, succeeding Dr. Arnold H. Kegel, city health commissioner, and a jury of distinguished scientists.

Judge Sabath has been asked to rule whether Mr. and Mrs. William Watkins and Mr. and Mrs. Bamberger received the right respective babies from the Englewood Hospital, where both infants, looking remarkably alike, were born June 30 last. The Bambergers say they have the proper child; the scientists ruled that the babies had been switched.

OBTAINS TWO WRITS

Mrs. Watkins is "not certain," and seeks a judicial opinion. Yesterday she obtained from Judge Robert E. Gentzel a writ of habeas corpus requiring the Bambergers to produce the child they now have in Judge Sabath's court today. She also obtained a temporary injunction to restrain the Bambergers from leaving Chicago.

Judge Gentzel assigned Judge Sabath to the case.

The dispute over the identity of the two babies has raged since the Watkins found the baby in their care labeled "Bamberger" and learned that the baby taken home by the Bambergers was labeled "Watkins."

LEGAL ACTIONS

Further complications in the case include a $100,00 damage suit brought by Mrs. Watkins against the Englewood Hospital and a suit in behalf of the infant in the Watkins' care, asking the Circuit Court to determine its parentage.

A statement by A. E. Paul, superintendent of the Englewood Hospital, will be published in the August 15 issue of Hospital Management, a journal devoted to hospital administration, contending that there was no mix-up of the babies.

Judicial Appointee Finds Flood of Congratulations On Reaching Maine Isle

By HERBERT CARYL,
International News Service.

SOUTHWEST HARBOR, Me., Aug. 9.—"Do you think women judges can deal as fairly with women defendants as men judges?"

"Absolutely," Miss Sara M. Soffel, Pennsylvania's first woman judge, replied with a finality that left no shadow of doubt.

There is no reason, she explained today, why women have not the same judicial attainments as men and the same point of view in matters of law and justice.

ARRIVES AT ISLAND

Arriving here after a five-day automobile tour from Pittsburgh to Binghampton, N. Y., to Lake George, through the splendors of the Adirondack Mountains to Lake Champlain, to Burlington, Vt., and thence across New Hampshire and Maine, Miss Soffel went by boat last evening to Great Cranberry Isle for a week's vacation.

The rugged island off Mt. Desert has often been vacation land for Miss Soffel, but her arrival this year found the residents doubly anxious to greet her and to extend their congratulations on her appointment as a judge of the Allegheny County Court.

GETS FISHER MESSAGE

At the home of Mrs. E. L. Spurling, Miss Soffel found the first official notification of her appointment contained in a message from Gov. John S. Fisher.

In a statement at Cranberry Isle, she said:

"I deeply appreciate the honor of the appointment to a bench which so closely touches the lives of men, women and children of our county."

Asked if she thought women judges could handle all types of cases as well as men judges, she replied:

"Women have the same required prerequisites as men in judicial matters and have the same point of view as men."

NOT FOR FEMININE RULE

"Do you think in time there will be all women judges in our courts?"

"No," she said, laughing, "it's not as bad as that."

"Are you in sympathy with the view that in time women will supplant men in the conduct of all affairs of government?"

"Not in our time, in our children's time or in the time of our children's children. Please don't think I'm as feminist as that. I wouldn't like to see such a condition of affairs."

TAKES OATH SOON

After she finishes answering the scores of telegrams and letters of congratulations that have been piling up in Mrs. Spurling's parlor, Miss Soffel will rest at the island a few days and then motor to Harrisburg and thence to Pittsburgh to take the oath of office. That will be two weeks hence.

Since last Tuesday the fisher folk and other residents of Great Cranberry Isle have been greatly interested in telegrams and long distance messages directed to Miss Soffel. The message to her from Gov. Fisher explained all.

TELEGRAMS PILE UP

Telegraph messages are telephoned from Bar Harbor to the island, but Mrs. Spurling had so many to handle that she decided the best thing to do was to have the telegraph companies stack them up and send them over by a messenger boy in a boat.

Miss Soffel was graduated from Wellesley College in the class of 1908 and has been a summer visitor to Maine often, so she is no stranger in New England territory.

She said she did not plan to visit Wellesley on her return motor trip to Pennsylvania, but may be at the college in the fall at a meeting of the alumni, of which she is first vice president.

HURT IN TAXI, THREE SUE

Damages totaling $55,000 are asked of the Pittsburgh Transportation Company, operators of Green taxicabs, in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court by three women who claim serious injuries resulted when the taxi in which they were traveling to St. Joseph's Hospital on May 18, 1928, skidded onto the sidewalk on the Brady Street Bridge. The women say they were thrown against the front of the cab, sustaining numerous hurts.

Mrs. Rose Denawetz asks $25,000 damages and her husband, John, sued for $10,000. Mrs. Denawetz says she called for the cab to take her from 6503 Morrowfield avenue to the hospital and was accompanied by Miss Sarah Fingold and Mrs. Rose Fingold. The former sued for $5,000 and the latter for $10,000. Her husband, Harry Fingold, asked another $5,000.

WICK, MERGER PLAINTIFF, DIES

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 9.—Death entered the steel merger trial for the second time yesterday when Myron C. Wick, Jr., 38, in whose name was filed the suit to enjoin the Bethlehem-Sheet and Tube merger, died from pneumonia, after a week's illness.

When court resumes after the funeral, an amendment to the petition will be asked, to replace Wick's name with that of the administrator of his estate.

The trial, which closed its sixth week yesterday, was halted June 27, when Leroy A. Manchester, general counsel for the Sheet and Tube company for 13 years, killed himself.

Wick was a joint plaintiff in the case with the International Shares Corporation.

He came from one of the pioneer iron and steel families of the Mahoning Valley. His father was one of the country's authorities in steel tube manufacturing processes.

7 DIE, 16 HURT IN MINE FALL

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Caught in a fall of timbers and debris in the Gilbertson colliery, of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company last night, seven miners were killed and 16 injured. Three of the injured may not recover, hospital physicians said.

Twenty-three men were working in the third level, about 1,900 feet below the surface, when the accident occurred, due, investigators believed, to a sudden collapse of timbering.

The crash of breaking timbers warned workers on the surface, and rescue crews set to work immediately. The colliery has been closed several months and new rails were being placeed to resume work Monda,.

Latest in Crime; Police Machine Gun Stolen

Disappearance of one of the two machine guns of the detective bureau was a mystery confronting police and detectives at the Central Police station today.

The gun was believed to have been stolen either from a locker in the inspector's room or from the detective's automobile on one of its trips. An investigation was begun.

VOLCANO PERILS AMERICANS

TOKIO, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—The Japanese volcano Mount Asama today was spouting forth an incandescent cloud of cinder and ashes, spreading a foreboding smoke pall over Karuisawa, favorite summer resort of Europeans.

The eruption followed a sudden violent explosion, and intense rumbling continued, intermittently as many inhabitants around its base transported belongings out of the danger zone. Scores of 800 foreigners there, among them many Americans, prepared to leave the vicinity.

This is the third and most severe eruption of Asama since June.

GRANTED WRIT AGAINST WIFE

A writ of habeas corpus has been procured in Common Pleas Court by Elmer E. Mutchler, of Bluff street, against his wife, Mrs. Laura E. Mutchler, requiring that she produce his young daughter, Doris Elizabeth, in court for a hearing August 22 to show cause why he should not be granted custody of the child.

Mutchler says Doris Elizabeth is being neglected and is badly in need of medical attention. The court awarded custody of the child to the wife last October 23, stipulating that the husband was to have the privilege of visiting her at reasonable times. He says the mother has moved three or four times, and he has had difficulty locating her.

He petitioned for a rehearing of the suit for custody, but states Mrs. Mutchler was not in court for the hearing July 2, and he alleges she has taken the child out of the jurisdiction of the court.

W. VA. KILLINGS CLEARED

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. Va., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Sheriff L. B. Snyder today said Melvin Slider had confessed after a day of questioning that he killed Lott Loudenslager on July 20 at the Loudenslager home near Mobley, after Loudenslager had murdered his wife and Annabelle Hupp, 15, a stepdaughter.

The charred bodies of the three were found in the burned Loudenslager cabin on July 23, and Slider was quoted as saying he fired the place three days after the killings because he was afraid.

Sheriff Snyder said Slider told him and Prosecuting Attorney George Cuaffield that he went to the Loudenslager place on July 20 and heard Mr. and Mrs. Loudenslager quarreling. When he went into the cabin, Slider was quoted as saying, he found that Loudenslager had killed his wife and the girl with an ax.

Loudenslager, he said, attacked him with the ax. Slider said that in his own defense he struck Loudenslager with an iron maul.

REPORT HORST BOY ALIVE

AKRON, O., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—The Akron Beacon-Journal yesterday said Wayne County investigators had uncovered new evidence leading to belief that Melvin Horst, Orrville, O., boy missing for two years, may still be alive.

The newspaper, in a copyrighted story, said investigation of the boy's disappearance was renewed after at least two persons reported seeing the boy alive after his disappearance December 27, 1928. Further impetus was given the search, the paper said, by the story told Roy Horst, uncle of the missing boy, by an Orrville bootlegger, but the nature of the story was not revealed.

Investigation of the disappearance lagged after Charles Hannah and Earl Conald were freed six months ago, after being charged with killing the boy and concealing his body.

Gas Station Holdup Suspect Arrested

J. J. Burke, 21, of 4216 Milgate street, was being held in the East End Police Station today on a suspicious person charge in connection with the robbery early yesterday of the Gulf Refining Company service station at Beatty and Mignonette streets, police say. The cash register in the place was looted of $66.

Bradford Output Of Oil Decreases

BRADFORD, Pa., Aug. 9.—Daily average crude oil production in the Bradford field was 20,500 barrels during July, a considerable decline from April's average of 33,700 and May's 31,165. The average per day in June was 27,200.

The Bradford conservation board has expressed confidence that the August figures will set a new low. With 75 per cent of operations in the field subscribed to the curtailment program.

Punchboard Raids Traps 3 Merchants

Three East Pittsburgh storekeepers are at liberty today on $50 forfeits pending hearings tonight before Burgess James Beech, in connection with seizures of punchboards and slot machines in stores in raids last night led by Police Chief Michael Kelly.

Those arrested were John Hasis, 657 Braddock avenue; William Annapolis, 727 Braddock avenue, and H. H. Paige, 108 Beech street, according to a police report.

Still, Mash Taken In Raid on Stable

A 200-gallon still, a quantity of mash and moonshine were confiscated early today when police under Capt. John H. Schnorr visited a stable in Watson street near Gist street. Louis Lepros, 24, 3232 Ward street, was arrested on a charge of violating the Snyder act.

Capt. Schnorr said Lepros had been in business only a few days.

Sheriff's Law Book Request Held up

Sheriff Robert S. Cain will have to explain to the county commissioners why he needs $500 worth of law books. His request for them was turned down by the commissioners at their meeting until he appears before the board and explains why he needs this many books when the county has one of the finest equipped law libraries in the country.

'Scoop' Lands Masefield Saga for Cosmopolitan

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(Universal.)—Ray Long, editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, has scooped King George.

The latest work of John Masefield, England's new poet laureate, is to have its first publication in America instead of Great Britain, it was announced today. The first installment of "The Wanderer," a saga of the sea, will appear in the September issue of the Cosmopolitan.

The Cosmopolitan's capture of England's prize poet is rated in magazine circles alongside Dr. Long's coup in signing up Calvin Coolidge while he was still President of the United States.

After its magazine publication, a special edition of "The Wanderer" will be printed, one copy of which will go to King George and another to Queen Mary.

But if the royal family of England want to read the tale beforehand they will have to buy a Cosmopolitan.

Byrd to Be Speaker Here During Safety Week

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd will head a list of 350 speakers who will take part in "Safety Week" in Western Pennsylvania September 29 to October 3. As a part of the celebration, the National Safety Council will hold its annual convention in Pittsburgh, which will bring 7,000 delegates to the city. Byrd will speak in Syria Mosque October 1, and later he will address a meeting of children in the Pitt Stadium.

The Safety Council was formed at a safety meeting here in 1912. At present it has branches in cities throughout the world.

The convention will hold sessions in the William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotels, with the larger gatherings being held in the mosque.

OPEN HIGHWAY TO WELLSBURG

A new direct all-paved road from Pittsburgh to Wellsburg, W. Va., has been thrown open by the removal this week-end of two detours on State Route 28, the Automobile Club of Pittsburgh announced today. These detours, between Avella and Rea, and between Mt. Pleasant Church and Rea, both in Washington County, were on while concrete highway was being laid. Now the Wellsburg-bound motorist picks up Route 28 at the Point Bridge and follows it through Bridgeville to Independence, from which point State Route 31 and West Virginia Route 27 lead to Wellsburg.

Other Western Pennsylvania detours lifted this week are: Route 480, Dixonville and Marion Center; Route 78, from Cochranton north and Route 220, in Lock Haven, on the direct route to Williamsport.

No new detours have been placed on Western Pennsylvania roads, and there will be no oiling next week.

Dry Spell Brings Old Town Pump Back to Use

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 9.—Waynesburg's historic "town pump," abandoned several months ago in favor of an electrically cooled water system, has been cleaned out and put in use again during the present drought. The well is in the Greene County courthouse yard. For more than a half century it served as a public drinking place and furnished water for early day "bucket brigades" in fighting fires.

FUNDS TO SAVE JOBS FOUND

Funds to pay 400 laborers of the city Department of Highways and Sewers, whose jobs are threatened by overstepped appropriations, will be taken from the police and fire funds at a meeting of Council Monday, President John S. Herron intimated yesterday.

Announcement by Director Edward O. Lang, of the Department of Public Works, that the men faced dismissal if money could not be secured, prompted Herron to call the meeting.

An appropriation which provided for 60 additions to the police and fire bureaus last March was not touched, Herron said, until July. Funds for that purpose, accumulating for March, April, May and June, are available for transfer to tide over the matter for the remainder of the season, it was said.

Boston Firemen Prepare for Fair

Boston Volunteer Firemen are making preparations for their annual fair to be held on the Boston Baseball Park Thursday, Friday and Saturday, next week. Prizes will be given the best firemen's musical organization in the line of march, the best appearing company, the most men in line, and the company traveling the greatest distance.

Announce Program At Waverly Church

The Rev. Dr. Charles H. McDonald will preach tomorrow morning in the Waverly Presbyterian Church, Braddock avenue and Forbes street.

DUQUESNE GIVES 35 DEGREES

Commencement exercises for the ninth annual summer session were to be held in the Campus Theater at Duquesne University at 10 a. m. Friday. Degrees were to be conferred on 35 graduates by the Rev. Dr. James F. Carroll, vice president of the university, as the presiding officer. Dr. E. T. Sage, head of the Latin department of the University of Pittsburgh, was scheduled to make the principal address.

The commencement program, planned without the customary caps and gowns due to the extreme heat of the past two weeks, called for music by the Sisters' Ensemble, a nuns' violin group. An enrollment of nearly 500 attended the courses this summer.

OHIO ALE LOAD SEIZED HERE

Fifty barrels of ale, valued by prohibition agents at $7,500, was stored in the government warehouse today following its seizure yesterday with a truck in which it was being transported from Ohio.

On a tip that the ale was being shipped here, prohibition agents trailed the truck in Island avenue, Stowe Township, and made the confiscation as it neared McKees Rocks. Ray Porter, 32, of West Ninety-third street, Cleveland, and Nathan Martin, 23, of 235 Dinwiddie street, were arrested, agents said.

Real Estate

A trade deal has been closed in which Laura M. McConnell has sold to George W. Herriott a 16-room house at Ross avenue and Pitt street. In part payment, the buyer deeded 80x166 feet vacant in Clifton street, Carrick. Lewis and Kyle were the brokers.

A tract of 100x119 feet in Reedsdale street, North Side, has been sold by Abigail E. Wainwright to the Corliss Creamery Company. The lot includes a frame dwelling.

The County of Allgheny has taken title to 17 acres in Lebanon Church road, Mifflin Township, from Nicholas Blank for $16,000. The ground is a part of the new airport.

A lot in Harden drive, Ross Township, 60x178 feet, has been sold by the North Hills Improvement Company to William P. Eidemiller.

The Commonwealth Trust Company sold for Charles A. Schafer to Louis Bluestone a two-story store and residence building with garage at 2630 Carson street, South Side.

A property on the south side of Phillips avenue near Wightman street, Squirrel Hill, has been sold by Joseph A. Rubinstein to Margaret W. Montgomery. The lot is 50x200 feet.

A house in Webster avenue, Fifth Ward, lot 37x100 feet, has been sold by Samuel R. Morsell to Robert Horton.

Building permit applications included:

FIRM SILENT IN WATER QUIZ

No reply has been received by President John S. Herron, of City Council, to his letter to the South Pittsburgh Water Company, in which he seeks information relative to low water pressure to homes in the South Hills area.

Several days ago Herron asked the water company to give him a report as to the causes of laxity in water pressure, he said last night, and to inform him what means might be used in the future to prevent similar occurrences.

During the present drought water users have complained they were unable to get water to upper floors. On some occasions for short periods the water supply would be negligible, they told Herron.

Discussing the matter, Herron said:

"The South Hills has to grow. There is no doubt that it will continue to do so. But the water supply has to be continuous. I asked the water company what it intended to do in securing an adequate supply at all times."

Gospel Center to Reopen Activities

The Gospel Center, working through the Central Presbyterian Church, Sandusky and North Diamond streets, North Side, will begin their fall activities within a week or two, with the popular Bible Hour, Fellowship Bible Class and the Wednesday Night Bible Class. The center meetings are held every Sunday evening, as an interdenominational activity. Religious leaders and theologians of note will make addresses at various times.

Army to Continue Summer Series

The third of a summer sermon program conducted at the Salvation Army headquarters each Sunday evening this month will be delivered at 8 p. m. tomorrow. The speaker will be Adjt. George Brooks. His subject will be "Faith." A feature of the program will be appropriate musical numbers under the direction of Bandmaster Bill Abrams.

Adolphus Lutheran Open-Air Services

The Gustavus Adolphus Lutheran Church, Friendship avenue and Evaline street, will hold an open-air Galilee service tomorrow evening near the farmhouse in Highland Park. The Rev. Olaf Lundgren, of McKeesport, will speak. At the morning service in the church, the Rev. W. E. Benson will speak on "A Flooded Rock."

Portable Chapel Dedication Tomorrow

The portable chapel of the Lutheran Mission, Mt. Royal boulevard, Undercliffe, will be dedicated tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. E. Myers, missionary superintendent, will have charge of the service. The Rev. Dr. F. B. Burgess will speak. The Rev. W. Blair Clancy, student pastor, will have charge of the mission.

'Nazarenes' to Be Sermon Subject

"The Nazarenes and the Carpenter" will be the morning subject of the Rev. Dr. H. D. Eckhardt, of St. Andrew's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Center and Morewood avenues. This will be Dr. Eckhardt's last service before leaving for his vacation.

ELECTRIC RAIL LINES STUDIED

In order to devise a program for electrification of transportation lines in Pittsburgh, the committee on electrification of the Chamber of Commerce will study information on hand from 12 cities in the United States, Donald J. Howard, secretary of the committee, announced.

Such cities as New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, where electrification programs have been put through on large scales, were among those answering the Pittsburgh Chamber's queries, Howard stated. Baltimore, another respondent, informed Howard that work similar to that proposed for this district by the Chamber has been started.

New Polish Church To Hold Services

Services will be held tomorrow by the newly organized Polish National Congregation in St. Francis Church, South Nineteenth and Carson streets.

The pastor, the Rev. Francis Klos has extended an invitation to all Polish people of Pittsburgh and vicinity to attend the services.

Harrisville (O.) Man Will be 100 Monday

CADIZ, O., Aug. 9.—Oliver G. Cope, Harrison County resident, will celebrate his one hundredth birthday Monday at the home of L. G. Steer at Harrisville, where he has been staying the past year.

LIBERTY DAIRY COMPANY SOLD

The Beatrice Creamery Company, operating 81 plants in 16 states, yesterday purchased the Liberty Dairy Products Corporation, officials announced. Payment will be made in the common and preferred stock of the Beatrice company, a $26,000,000 corporation.

The Liberty corporation, formed in 1926 through the consolidation of the Shadyside Milk Company, Reinhold Ice and Ice Cream Company and the Kittanning Pure Milk Company, which operated as the Hermes-Groves Dairy Company, was incorporated at $2,700,000.

Purchase of the Liberty marks the first entrance into the eastern field of the Beatrice company. All other plants are operated between the Ohio River and the Rocky Mountains.

West Homesteaders Urge Annexation

Petitions for annexation to Pittsburgh are being circulated by a group of West Homestead citizens who oppose having the South Pittsburgh Water Company furnish the borough's supply beginning October 1. Councilman Philip Kavanaugh, former Borough Clerk C. F. Adams and John R. Carney are leaders in the movement.

Petitions against annexation are also in circulation in the borough. The water supply, center of the dispute, is now received from Homestead.

Stunning Street Dress

Pattern 2008

Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

This jaunty model introduces an unusual effect through the V lines of bodice and skirt yoke. The skirt is beautifully flared to fall in soft, graceful folds. Collar and cuffs, so important in the latest mode, are made of white pique or organdy. A leather or a fabric belt is equally smart.

Pattern 2008 may be made of any one of the following fabrics with equally good results . . pique, shantung, flat or canton crepe, velvet, dull satin or a lightweight woolen. A solid color or a print will be delightful.

May be obtained only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 14 requires 3⅝ yards of 39-inch fabric and ¾ yard of 27-inch trimming.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Miss Bryce Engaged To Wed

Notable in the news of the week-end is a betrothal, that of a Pittsburgh girl who now spends much of her time in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Graham Bryce, of Pittsburgh and Pasadena, Cal., announces the engagement of their daughter, Marion Mehard Bryce, to Gordon Hawes Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Oliver Bennett, of Penn Yan, N. Y.

Marion is a graduate of the Santa Barbara Girls' School, and attended Miss Helen L. Stout's European Travel School. Her fiance is a graduate of Hobart College.

Yesterday I told you quite a bit about the novel costume barn dance Miss Lillian Washburn Newlin, of New York, Bar Harbor and Newport, would give this evening in her Newport place, "The Playhouse," for her niece, Helen Louise Tunnell, debutante daughter of the E. P. Tunnells, of Aylesboro avenue. Before the event, to which the 200 guests will come in idealized costumes of farmer folks, there'll be a number of dinners.

Many Dinners

Mrs. George Mesta, of Washington, formerly of Pittsburgh, will give one such event. And Commodore and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Sarah Woodward, daughter of the William Woodwards, and Mrs. F. Lathrop Ames, all prominent socially in the East, will entertain at similar events.

Miss Mary McMahon, daughter of Mrs. Sara McMahon, of Regent Square, became the bride of Dr. Edward J. Fillinger, son of Mrs. Margaret Fillinger, of the East End, on Wednesday morning with the Rev. F. A. Pearns officiating.

August Wedding

The bride appeared in madonna blue point d'esprit with a hat to match and carried summer flowers, and her only attendant, Miss Louella Piccardo, wore pink point d'esprit, with hat to match. She carried an arm bouquet of garden flowers. Edward C. Devlin and John P. McMahon were ushers.

Presenting the wedding music were Miss Edith White and Edward White, of Bellevue. A wedding breakfast in the Rittenhouse followed the ceremony. After an eastern wedding trip, Dr. and Mrs. Fillinger will be at home in the Craig Manor apartments.

Miss Rebecca Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Thompson, of Penn avenue, and Dr. E. O. Ruder, of Pittsburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ruder, of Mt. Pleasant, were married Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. The Rev. William P. Boyle was officiant. After a motor trip through Canada, Dr. and Mrs. Ruder will be at home following September 1 in McNary boulevard, Wilkinsburg.

Miss Anna White, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. White, of Chelton avenue, Brookline, and Fred J. Treytle, of Brookline, were married Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock in the Resurrection Church, Brookline, by the Rev. J. L. Quinn.

Church Wedding

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, G. Sherman Shock, wore flesh chiffon and a hat of eggshell horsehair braid, and carried pink roses and lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant, Miss Celestine O'Rourke, of East Pittsburgh, wore green chiffon with an eggshell horsehair hat, and carried yellow gladioli. Charles Kennedy, of Brookline, was best man.

Ferns and palms with flowers in white decorated the church, and pink and white garden flowers the home, where the wedding breakfast was served. The mother of the bride wore beige georgette with a hat to match and a corsage of tea roses.

After an Eastern motor trip, Mr. and Mrs. Treytle will be at home in Chelton avenue, Brookline.

Miss Emma McCrea and Miss Gertrude McCrea, of Second street, Aspinwall, are entertaining this afternoon in their home with a bridge luncheon in honor of Miss Alberta R. Kahn, of Aspinwall, whose marriage to John M. Richardson, of Castle Shannon, will take place Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Aspinwall Methodist Episcopal Church. The guests will include members of the bridal party. Pink and white summer flowers will decorate the McCrea home.

The bride-elect will have her sister, Miss Lucille Kahn, as maid of honor, and another sister, Miss Dorothy Kahn, and Miss Betty Beatty, as bridesmaids. Donald Kahn will give his sister in marriage.

Eugene Garmany will be best man, and Kenneth Richardson, brother of the bridegroom-elect, Alexander Clark Kahn, Jr., brother of the bride-elect, Raymond Coss and Dr. Francis Brantlinger will be ushers.

Performing the ceremony will be the Rev. W. S. Trosh, Allegheny district superintendent. Mrs. Helen Brittain Haynes, of Lansing, Mich., formerly of Pittsburgh, will sing, and Miss Evalyn Jones, of Indiana, Pa., will play the wedding march.

Mrs. J. B. Henry, of Lewistown, entertained recently in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Albert Kumer, of Aspinwall, with a luncheon in honor of the bride-elect; Mrs. F. A. Henry and her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Limborg entertained for her as did Mrs. Milton B. Creasy and Mrs. Maxwell Creasy, who gave a luncheon recently for her.

Mrs. William Lewinter, of Wightman street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Esther Lewinter, to Meyer A. Sherman, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Sherman, of Beacon street.

Ministers Protest Sunday Swimming

Dormont council received letters protesting against the opening of the borough swimming pool on Sundays at its meeting last night. The letters were from ministers in the borough and Mt. Lebanon and the South Hills Ministerial Association. The ministers declared the Sunday opening was harmful to the morals of the community.

Letters commending the councilmen for opening the pool were received from many residents.

NEWSIES STOP HERE ON TOUR

The Chicago Evening Journal's junior carriers, on a 2,500-mile Grand Circle Tour of the East, left Pittsburgh today for home. The 27 youths are winners of a circulation contest recently held by the newspaper.

The party, traveling by bus, met President Hoover in Washington, sat in Vice President Curtis' chair, and in Albany, N. Y., they were the guests of Gov. Roosevelt.

Let Contract Soon For Ohio River Link

STEUBENVILLE, O., Aug. 9.—The Ohio Highway Department will let the contract this month for the final stretch on the Ohio River highway, providing a through route between Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

THE SMART WOOLEN SUIT LACKS TRIMMING DETAIL

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, AUG. 9.—If you insist on a trim effect in your little daytime suit this season, you will not be overtrimmed, for the very smartest suits now being shown here are emphatically trim and trig. Such suits of fine woolens mostly in black are much liked by the true cosmopolitaine who invariably selects clothes that are comfortable and easy and yet smart enough to be at home wherever they may be worn. And this is possible only with well-cut but distinctly simple garments entirely devoid of trimming or non-essential detail. It is only the poorly cut garment of poor material that is forced to hide its deficiencies with fussy trimming and embellishments. A simple but jauntily cut suit of fine woolen should give the wearer constant service and pleasure and is as essential in an unpretentious wardrobe, as it is in a well-stocked clothes cupboard, which meaps that it is a most important item, and well worth its original cost which is not apt to be little, if the suit really is from a good house or is a fine copy.

IF YOU ARE PLANNING a smart black woolen suit, we can cordially recommend something on the order of the Jane Regny model sketched today. It is of fine black woolen and is very chic with its short open jacket which discloses a demure blouse of turquoise blue crepe de chine. Although the suit gives the effect of simplicity it is most intricately tailored.

* * *

WE ARE SEEING a good deal of shantung this season not only for sports wear but for more formal clothes. The Marie Bordes model shown will give an adequate idea of what can be done with shantung by a clever designer. The frock is of rose shantung with a collar which is really a small double cape taking the place of sleeves and it is trimmed with points of white pique. An ideal frock for afternoon wear at a vacation resort.

Pittsburgh Scouts Get Indian Rain God

Ten Pittsburgh Boy Scouts and two scoutmasters today are the proud possessers of a Hopi Indian rain god, picked up in the Rocky Mountains. They arrived in the city with the little clay god yesterday and with them arrived the showers. The scouts had made a 9,000-mile truck tour to Caspar, Wyo., to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the breaking of the Oregon trail. Clark Johnston, scoutmaster of Crafton, returned with his scouts and, upon learning of the drought, showed his friends the little rain god. Shortly after their arrival the rain fell.

Hungarians Honor Kline at Banquet

BUDAPEST, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Mayor Charles H. Kline, of Pittsburgh, Pa., today was presented, at a municipal banquet in his honor, with a valuable watch that once was the property of Louis Kossuth, noted Hungarian statesman. Mayor Kline is returning a visit made to Pittsburgh two years ago by Budapest officials.

REVIEWS OF NEW SHOWS COMBINED WITH AMUSEMENT CHAT

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

We feel inclined to pass on verbatim the periods reported in our speakeasy spy. Here it is:

"Hey, why don't you do what you call your own respectable way, write something about the old-time collectors. The brewery collectors used to drop around every Monday and collect the new bill of the preceding week. They'd start up from the market dropping into Goettman's, Newell's and the other places and in every stop they'd buy drinks for the house. Then they'd work down Liberty avenue, beginning with the old Rush House, which was the most elegant place in town.

"Well, by the time they were half through the bar flies would be on their trail, following them into all the saloons and tossing away that free drink.

"Then there were the wine salesmen, too, but you're too young to know much about them. They used to drop around once a month. And they were the flashy guys—checkered suits, diamonds in their neckties and on their fingers.

"They'd buy half a dozen drinks for the house and then on the q. t. they'd slip the bartender a five-spot so he'd push their particular brand. Don't ask me if those were the good old days.

"You won't believe this because you're one of those upright guys, but I'm telling you that nine out of every ten of the boys in the racket today would rather have the open saloon than the speakeasies they're running. They've got all kinds of worries—flat beer, poison whisky, protection money, the federal pinch and things like that.

"Speaking of flat beer reminds me that they're still running beer in the barrels that were made before prohibition. And that's why every so often a fellow who's running a speaky gets a flat barrel.

"Those barrels are pretty old now and there's no cooperage—nobody to rub them with resin to keep the air in (who remembers the old coopers?), or to replace the hoops. The beer runners today haven't got time to bother with that stuff.

"Well, they send out the beer these days in rotted barrels and the air gets out of them and the beer goes flat, so that barrel's just a dead loss.

"Another thing that hurts the barrels—in the old days the drivers used to bounce the barrels off their trucks onto hard mats that they laid on the sidewalk. They can't do that any more. They've just got to let the barrel drop. And when you let an old barrel drop so often, why you're not doing that barrel any good.

"Aw, what's the use?"

Pittsburghers Back From Europe Trip

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Returning from a summer vacation, Dr. Kenneth M. Day, Mrs. C. B. Bartlett and Henry Hilton Green, also of Pittsburgh, arrived from Europe on the Mauretania. The Pittsburghers were abroad nearly two months, visiting England and the Continent.

"Boudoir Diplomat" Gets By Hays' Office on Way to Screen

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 9.

After having considerable trouble getting "The Boudoir Diplomat" by the Hays office, Universal now is in a quandry about finding the proper actor to take the principal role.

The last of the three feminine leads was signed today—Betty Compson. She'll divide honors in the film with Mary Duncan and Jeanette Loff. Betty's role is the one for which Mary Nolan originally was selected. Later, it was decided for Mary to be loaned to Warner Brothers, where an attractive role was offered in "Ex-Mistress."

A logical candidate for the masculine lead in "The Boudoir Diplomat" is Basil Rathbone who did a splendid job of it on the stage. In those days the play was known as "The Command to Love." The U hasn't been blind to Mr. Rathbone's qualifications but the negotiations developed a hitch. Douglas Fairbanks Jr. was eager for the role but didn't get it. No wonder either, for Mr. Rathbone is scarcely in the sophisticated type.

Mary Duncan.

The direction of this suave comedy falls to Malcolm St. Clair, a veteran of the silent pictures.

ANNA Q. RECOVERS

After many setbacks Anna Q. Nilsson seems now on the definite road to recovery. She was released from the hospital several days ago and is spending a week with the Basil Rathbones until her Beverly Hills home can be redecorated. This time she will invite no relapse by a premature return to the films. The doctors have promised that, with proper care, she should be completely well by late fall. Then she'll do a talkie. It's been very discouraging for the star to be out of things at a time when the movies were undergoing a vital transformation. Her hip injury was suffered in a fall from a horse months ago.

Anna Q. Nilsson

VAMPIRE SOUGHT

The supernatural, which has been, avoided by the movies, for some reason or other, will be in the fore with the production of "Dracula" by Universal. This Bram Stoker novel was dramatized and played with notable success, both here and abroad. A film adaptation is now being made by Louis Bromfield, and the U is looking for an actor to play the dread Count Dracula. Bela Lugosi, the creater of the role in New York, is in Hollywood, and there is some possibility of his being signed. Perry Ivins, who did the part of the maniac, Renfield, in one of the Eastern companies, also is here, and is reported to be under consideration for the film version. Once upon a time Big Bill Tilden, the tennis star, of all people, played Count Dracula on the road.

Woman Fires to Rout Prowlers, Hits Man

John Blaco, 24, of Creighton, was in the Allegheny Valley Hospital today recovering from a bullet wound in the side, said to have been inflicted by Mrs. B. F. Miller, who lives on a small farm off the Bakerstown road.

Blaco was shot, police say, while he and his three sisters and brother-in-law, Joseph Curtis, were near, if not on, the Miller property. County detectives said Mrs. Miller told them she fired to frighten away prowlers.

TROOPS PRAISED BY COL. WOOD

CAMP HALL, Tobyhanna, Pa., Aug. 9.—Concluding the third full day at the guns, the 107th Field Artillery returned to the reservation late yesterday confident they are fully prepared for the show-down inspection scheduled during the tactical maneuvers of the regiment in bivouac early next week.

Col. Eric Fisher Wood is pleased with the showing of his men on the firing ranges the past three days. He declares inexperienced gunners, drivers and communication details have shown a surprising aptitude at their respective duties.

Preparatory to mustering the artillerymen into federal service for the two weeks camp period, the regimental headquarters staff under Lieut. Edward P. Stevens, acting adjutant, and Lieut. John G. Hirtz, has been working 14 hours daily, preparing the payroll data by which the federal inspectors will muster the soldiers in Tuesday.

FISHER REVIEW DUE AT GRETNA

MT. GRETNA, Pa., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania National Guard units encamped here are prepared for a review today by Gov. John S. Fisher.

The 103rd Cavalry spent Friday in dismounted combat practice. Maj. Gen. William G. Price, Jr., commander of the National Guard, held a reception last night for the officers of the regiment.

Both the 109th and 110th Infantry spent today working out combat problems, doing landscape exercises and preparing for the review and inspection.

Officers of the United States Army were to inspect the units this morning. Gov. Fisher will review the troops at 2:30 p. m.

Traffic Officer's Car Stolen, Found

When Lieut. Edward Goodman, of the traffic division, stepped out of his automobile to help direct traffic at Hays and Beatty streets last night, two young men stepped into his machine and drove away. Lieut. Goodman recovered the car several hours later in Black street, near North Negley avenue.

MR. SILLS IS MOVIE GANGSTER IN ALDINE

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Milton Sills, who used to be one of the big he-men in the silents, is a gangster molded to the usual movie pattern in "he Aldine. His picture is titled "Man Trouble."

He falls for a girl who is a good girl. He operates a great big night club. He sends fellows for a ride. And in the end he gets put on the spot himself. Which makes it nice for the good girl, for by that time she is in love with a good boy.

Christmas Eve on the old farm is dragged into the picture. There are the snowflakes, sleighbells and everything.

The good girl in the film is Dorothy Mackaill. She's a cabaret entertainer. She sings a sentimental ballad and gets wet-eyed every time she thinks of the old home. Kenneth McKenna is the good boy. He's a newspaper man who writes heart-touching pieces about the Yuletide.

There is another newspaper man in the film also. Yes, you've guessed right: a drunken reporter.

TAX EXEMPTION SURVEY URGED

When the Y. M. C. A. was declared to be exempt from county taxes in an opinion of Judge Ambrose B. Reid, read yesterday at the commissioners' meeting, County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong moved that an investigation be made of the Salvation Army and all other similar organizations toward placing them on the non-taxable list. Armstrong said:

"They should all be placed in the same classification.

Commissioner Charles C. McGovern did not vote on the resolution.

He said:

Crooner

Rudy Vallee, crooning orchestra director, popular radio entertainer, will be a feature at the Willows, Oakmont, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, appearing at the head of his Connecticut Yankees.

Confession

Little lady, I can take you
Out to dinner where the wine
Brings a tingle—I can make you
Think you are a dream of mine
Quite come true—and little lady
We can see a Broadway show,
Where the dialogue is shady—
Shedding quite a sensuous glow.

Little lady, I can squire you
To a tinselled night club, too;
Where the music may inspire you
To do things you shouldn't do;
But this lad, my little lady,
Cannot give his heart—I know
It's a shame, but I'm afraid he

—The "Torch" Singer.

As If You Didn't Know

Wives and relatives are people who wonder how you contrive to keep on fooling the world.

Dawgawn!

Dave A. Cutting reports this conversation between two columnists who were reading the headlines in a newspaper:

"Hot dam!" one ejaculated. "look hear! Three columnists held up a bank in Chicago!"

"Hmmm-mmm!" chirped the other. "We sure are coming up in the world!"

Boomerang

It is S. Jay Kaufman's favorite anecdote about Jack Osterman and a well-known revue producer. Osterman, whose clown imitation of Master Vallee will go down in history as One Of The Heartier Laughs of 1930, was feuding with the boss about this, that, them and those, but particularly about a raise in wages.

When the quarrel ended the producer cooed:

"From now on I want you to be happy while working for me—I want you to consider yourself like a son."

"That's very lovely of you," snapped Jack, "but never mind. A son gets an allowance. I want a salary."

Diagnosis

We are one mentality,
Our souls are one complete.
Queer that there should be
A double heart-beat.

They met, conversed, these two.
The woman he had married,
And the one he wanted to.
They smiled, clasped hands . . .
Just in the way folks will—
The woman he had married,
And the one that he loved still.
In their eyes each held a question:

Add Fouls

Overheard in a night club at a quarter after three:

First Chorine: "After taking up all my time for a month he now tells me he is married, the big bum!"

Anecdote

William Charles Macready was the famous actor who managed, along with Edwin Forrest, to stir up the Astor Place riots. He was a crotchety bird; but he kept a diary in which he castigated himself in a most virulent manner.

At dinner one night at the Garrick Club with Charles Dickens, Charles Reade and William Makepeace Thackeray, he was particularly disagreeable.

When he got home that evening, however, he noted in his diary that he had acted his usual disagreeable self, and added:

"God gave up two ears and one mouth. Pity we don't take the hint."

The Retort Grand

Dayton Stoddart, one of the better of the high-class exploiters, was holidaying in the mountains. Before exploring the most heavily wooded sectors, his guide said:

"Are you afraid of rattlesnakes?"

"What!" ejaculated Dayton, "after 12 years on Broadway?"

Nearly 2,000 graduate nurses and their friends are expected to attend the affair which will be held on the Steamer Washington.

"LITTLE ACCIDENT" HAS PLENTY OF LAUGHS IN SHERIDAN

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Anita Page in "The Little Accident" are the Sheridan Square comedy feature. This movie is taken from the stage play of the same name. It's chock full of laughs, emanating from embarrassing situations.

You see, Norman (Fairbanks) is about to be married. Then he learns that he is a father, the mother of the child being his "annulled wife," as he calls her.

While he waits in a maternity hospital to see the infant, "Slim" Sommerville and Henry Armetta appear on the scene. Expectant fathers, they are.

WATCHFUL WAITING

Have you ever waited in the lobby of a hospital for that baby to arrive? Have you ever had six girls arrive and waited, hoping that the seventh child will be a boy? If you have, the scene will show you the humorous side of it. If you haven't, you may, by vicarious experience, learn nonchallance from these two.

Norman takes the baby—by dint of ruse—home to his bachelor's apartment, hires a nurse and studies baby diet. Then the question to him becomes that of whether he'll marry Madge (Sally Blane), Monica, the nurse, (Zazu Pitts), or Isabel (Anita Page).

BEST MAN HELPS

While you rock with laughter, it works itself out, with the aid of the intended best man, Gilbert (Roscoe Karns).

Karns, Sommerville and Armetta capture the laurels. Anita Page does a good job, although she's late breaking into the picture. And Miss Pitts does well her bit.

Collegians from Cornell, Princeton, Yale and Penn will want to see a Grantland Rice short on the program. It will bring home to them memories of their alma maters. Cornell's crew and glee club absorb about half the flicker, with some nice shots of the campus thrown in. Princeton-Yale baseball, Penn football complete it all.

STAGE ACTS CHANGE; TWO FILMS ARE KEPT

Beginning today, the Harris stage acts, featuring Victor Graff and Harrison's R-K-Olians, will change, but the picture, "Her Unborn Child," remains. It will be held for another full week.

The Pitt also keeps its screen feature for a second week. This is "Unguarded Girls," presented for audiences of women only. The bill includes lectures and demonstrations by living models.

Board Orders Third Registration Day

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 9.—The Mahoning County board of elections has ordered another registration Monday, despite instructions to the contrary from Secretary of State Clarence W. Brown. For several months Brown has been at loggerheads with the Mahoning County board, and declares it is the only one in the state which is confused by the new regulations governing registrations.

At first the board decided not to have a third registration day Monday, and then changed its mind.

GALLANT MR. COLMAN IS RITZY THIEF IN THE PENN

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Ronald Colman dons a full-dress suit and a tall hat and goes about the slim business of cracking safes in "Raffles," new talkie in the Penn. He's a gentleman burglar in this one. And what a gentleman! He has a kiss for every lady's hand and a polite gesture for every policeman.

The picture is based on the Hornung fiction stories, the central character of which is Raffles, the amateur cracksman.

On the screen a girl comes into Raffles' life in that big way. So he decides to go straight. Then a pal of his gets into a jam, needs a lot of money and needs it badly. And this Raffles, besides being a burglar and a gentleman, is true blue. He plans one more job in an effort to get money for his friend.

COMES THE POLICE

So off he goes to a fashionable house party at one of those English estates, where he combines business with pleasure. He plays cricket and is gallant with the ladies. And he steals the diamond necklace belonging to his hostess from another thief, who happened to get it first.

Come now the complications. Scotland Yard is all over the place, which means that Raffles doesn't have such an easy time of it. And eventually a canny Scotch detective, in the person of David Torrence, gets the "goods" on him. But the ending is happy enough, anyway, even if it does occur in that notorious London fog.

INTELLIGENT ACTORS

The picture is well directed and well acted. And its story is developed humorously in an atmosphere of aristocratic society.

In addition to Mr. Colman and Mr. Torrence, other members of the cast who show intelligent work are Kay Francis, Alison Skipworth and Frederick Kerr.

The stage revue is titled "August Follies." It has a roller-skating act that is a sensation. Featured place on the bill goes to the Arnaut Brothers, two fellows keen at the clowning. They have a unique manner of whistling that keeps one amused. The revue includes other specialty entertainers. A Wild Oscar organlogue and a David Pesetzki overture are on the bill.

POWELL IS WELCOMED AS ENRIGHT M. C.; FILM COMEDY

By KAYE GODARD

Dick Powell celebrates his return to East Liberty this week at the Enright and starts off with "My Guitar and You." As master of ceremonies he walks off with all the honors and is still smiling when the curtain comes down. The comedy team, Montrose and Reynolds, appeal to East Liberty's sense of humor in a big way, and there's a little French girl who sings in an appealing manner.

The picture "The Matrimonial Bed," featuring Frank Fay, is a riotous affair with just a touch of pathos. The story concerns a man who has been in a train wreck and has lost his memory. For five years he is a hairdresser and then, strange coincidence, goes to his own house to oblige the friend of one of his customers. His new customer turns out to be his own wife but he has no recollection of ever having seen her before.

An old friend of the family sees him there and puts him under a hypnotic spell to find out who he really is. In five minutes his five years as a hairdresser have been completely wiped out and he can't realize all that's happened. His wife has married the man he disliked more than any other of their acquaintances, and he, himself, in his years of unconsciousness, has acquired a wife, four sons and innumerable sweethearts.

Things are finally straightened out after a fashion, although the manner of solving the difficulty leaves one feeling as if the poor husband who finds himself with two wives just hasn't had a fair deal.

The bill includes Johnny Mitchell at the organ and the usual run of short subjects.

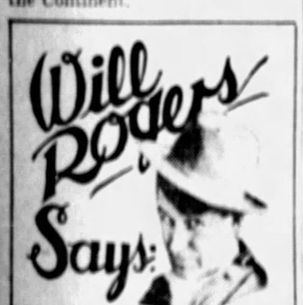
Will Rogers Says:



BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 9.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Been reading a lot lately and seeing movies of the French evacuating the Rhine. That's all fine away over in Europe, but what about the Republicans evacuating the South? They are moving back to the Democrats. They have been holding foreign territory for two years. This being an off presidential year, the Democrats look great. The Republicans always look bad three years out of four, but the year they look good is election year. A voter doesn't expect much. If you give him one good year he is satisfied.

Yours,
WILL.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question — Has the cost of living been reduced very much in the past few months?

GRACE JACOBS, store manager, Morrowfield Hotel—It seems to me that you can get twice as good value for your money these days as you could not long ago. For instance, good clothes can be had at just half their former price now.

Grace Jacobs

A. DIEHL, store owner, McKeesport — It's hard to say whether it's going up or down as a final statement. It has gone both up and down so often that I don't think prices are sufficiently settled to say anything definitely.

A. Diehl

MISS LOUISE LETELLIER, saleswoman, East End—Well, as far as clothes are concerned the styles are better and so are the materials, and the buyer really gets more for his money.

Miss LeTellier

HERMAN PHILLIPS, store manager, Hill District—I think the cost of living is just about the same as it has been for quite some time. I can't see very much change in the prices of things recently.

Herman Phillips

J. W. TRUSSELL, shoe repairman, Beechview—No, I don't think the cost of living has been reduced much. It's just about the same as far as I can see.

J. W. Trussell

JULIUS SCHNEIDER, engineer, Crafton—I think the cost of living has gone up. Foods are all higher in price now because of this dry spell and if the heat doesn't soon come to an end, the prices will go even higher.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

How Much Money Should Parents Receive?

There's the problem that Sally's putting up to you today. And it isn't just her problem. Thousands of youngsters are puzzling over the same question and getting maddern hops when Ma and Dad settle it by grabbing the whole pay check. For that's the answer to this debate in many a home.

"We brought you into the world," say the old folks. "Think of all you owe us in return for the years and years we worked for you. Now we're getting old, it's your turn to help. And you oughta be ashamed of yourself for grumbling"——

Do you think the old folks are right?

Do you believe that Sally or Sammy should hand over all they earn with the exception of a few pennies for carfare and lunch?

Or do you agree with Sally, who says she "didn't ask to be born," so why should she spend her life working out a debt to dad?

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I read your column every day and I have decided to bring my problem to you. I guess it isn't so different from a lot of others, but it is breaking my heart and my spirit. Can you help me? Here's the story in a nutshell.

"MONEY" FATHER

"I have one of those fathers whose only thought is money. He hustled me out to work when I was only 15. I wanted to keep on at school, but he said that was all foolishness. That I owed it to him to go to work.

"I'm 17 now, and in all I've only been out of work for about two weeks. I don't think that is doing badly, do you? But he complains about it. I wouldn't mind working, if I ever got anything out of it, but the trouble is that he takes every cent I make, and only allows me a few pennies every week. Just about enough for carfare. He calls it 'spending money.' I wouldn't even mind all that so much, but he doesn't want me to ever go any place or have any fun. And he wouldn't hear of me ever having a boy friend. He says I have plenty of time for that, and that I shouldn't be going around with them . . . that he'll find me a husband when the time comes.

"Isn't that sickening? It has been going on like that for so long that I've decided the only thing I can do is to leave home.

"When I object to the way he does, he gets awfully mad, and says that if it weren't for him, I wouldn't have ever been born. Well, that's true, of course, but I didn't ask to be born, and what's living good for when you have to live like I do?

"He says that as long as I live under his roof and eat his food I'll have to give him all I earn and obey what he says. Is that fair? I don't think it is, and I'm getting awfully tired of it.

"Please help me. Tell me what I should do. Should I leave home? I don't think I can stand it much longer. I am the oldest of nine children, and he has the same ideas about all of us. He thinks we owe him our lives just because he brought us into the world. I wouldn't mind paying him board, but he won't hear to that. It might be acknowledging that we children have a right to our money, and that he won't stand for. I'm sick of it all, and of him. Do you think I'm right, or am I just selfish?

"SALLY."

FATHER WRONG

Are you selfish? Well, maybe, little sister. Most of us are. But I know that at your age I'd probably have raised 10 times as much Cain as you're raising now. For dad is wrong.

Children don't owe their parents a debt for the gift of life. No child ever asked to be born—and generally the gladsome event is almost as much of a surprise to Mama and Papa as to little Junior. And this much is sure—every baby gives as much to the parents as the parents give to it . . . Gives in love and joy and pride and priceless opportunity.

So your dad owes you fully as much as you owe him, Sally. And he deliberately violated that debt by taking you out of school and making you work at fifteen. That wasn't a sentimental violation—it was real law-breaking, and if he tries it with the other children, the Juvenile Court should be informed.

So here's one lady who's going to back your peeve, honey. But perhaps some other readers won't agree with us.

How about it, Mister and Misses? How do you feel toward your children? Think that God gave 'em to you so you could run an employment agency? Or do you feel that you owe them all the love and service you can give and then some?

And how about it, Rosie and Mamie and Jennie and Carl and Tony and Jo? How much of your pay check do you give the Old Folks? Do you think you give too much? Do you think you should give any? And if not, why not? Let's hear.

BEAUTY A LA MODE

Drawn By Nell Brinkley

Beauty herself is eternal. But she has her modes and fashions, just as the feminine frock, and everything else under the sun has. Somebody said that change was the one unchanging thing in the world. One short life is enough for an entire change of character; and a man can change his mind more than once in the cramped space of a day.

The Ugly Duckling of the school yard, whose hair-ribbon is safe from the little Bills, is the Swan of the Venetian garden-party that all the big Bills crowd the pond over in later years. The youth whose hair and eyes caused a pain in the chest of you at the age of fifteen looks odd and old-fashioned now, with his abundant locks and high collar. Where is the lover of yesteryear? Unless you have lived with him through changes of face and fashion he is just where the snows of that year are—long melted and gone. His portrait now wakes smiles instead of sighs. How the world changes, says you! And say we all.

And the world's taste in beauty changes too.

The girl who walked the streets in beauty when your Daddy was a young spark—who hung his dancing shoes around his neck and shinned down the elm at the corner of the farm-house when the family was asleep—is not the girl who walks the streets in beauty today. The girl they painted, idealized, dreamed of, turned to stare at when they saw the dream realized, was a girl who would look odd to you today. Hair different—shape of eyes and nose—the ideal mouth, how different!—the line of chin and cheek—the roses for decoration—the glistening sea-shells for a necklace—the latest thing perhaps! All different.

Look at this copy of an old painting by Leighton, called SYLVIA. Some of us think that a lovely face today!

Then think, if you can, of an impression of the typical beauty of today—that is, if you trust the artist who splashes her face over half the "white space" of the world—and your own eyes that see her pass by the thousands a day. Her beauty—how different from that of Sylvia. Contour of head, nose, mouth, eyes, chin—expression, background—all. How different!

"Sylvia" was one mode in beauty, and the saucy Mees at the right, who is very likely to be named "Billy," is the perky exponent of another.

The young man, who in spite of Babylonian buildings and saucy beauties with poster-red lips, inclines to Sylvia, can still find her—at least in feature and temper, with diligent search—but he will find her with close-cut hair and no pink sea-shells for a necklace to ensnare. —NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

Some Facts About the Pancreas

The pancreas is one of the vital organs of the body. It is a long, thin gland, weighing not more than three or four ounces. It lies under and behind the stomach, somewhat to the left side. It produces a liquid secretion called the pancreatic fluid. Although the organ is small, it secretes about one and three-fourths pints of digestive fluid daily.

DR COPELAND

Very close to the point where the stomach contents pass into the intestinal canal, the pancreas empties into the intestine also. As the food leaves the stomach it is almost immediately mixed with the bile, produced by the liver and with the fluid from the pancreas.

The pancreatic fluid is of great value to the body. Among other things, it dissolves the particles or masses of food which have not been liquefied by the churning and juices of the stomach.

It does more than this. It assists in converting the starchy foods into sugar, which then can be dissolved and made useful to the body. The lean parts of meat, the curds of milk and the glutinous parts of cereals are all liquefied by the pancreatic juice. Fats that have become an oily mixture in the stomach are digested and emulsified by the pancreatic juice.

The bile helps here, too. It does good work in preventing decomposition in the intestines and stimulates the bowels.

Food to be useful in the body must be dissolved and liquefied by these valuable secretions, the pancreatic juice and the bile. You can see how important the pancreas is. When it stops working you begin to have trouble.

Additional interest has been given the pancreas in recent years in the treatment of diabetes. It was found that the substance called "insulin," which is obtained from the pancreas of animals, such as cattle and sheep, is extremely valuable. If it is injected into the circulation of the diabetic patient the disease may be checked.

Insulin, if used for a long time and with the proper regulation of the diet, is capable of doing wonders. It enables the person afflicted with diabetes to live a useful life over the natural span of years.

It is not good for us to have the pancreas fail to function properly. Immediately we begin to lose the nourishing values of certain foods. They pass through the body without being properly dissolved and are left unready for absorption by the blood.

There may be an acute type and a chronic type of inflammation of the pancreas. These cases are not common and are difficult to diagnose.

If people would follow simple rules of personal hygiene and eat in moderation proper foods the likelihood of pancreatic trouble would be reduced to a minimum. Like all the other functions, the pancreatic is promoted by right living.

Madge Reveals Details of Savarin's Tragic Letter

I felt my cheeks crimson at Harry Underwood's comment upon my statement that in the years of his absence he had not loved Lillian. He was right. I did know so well what he meant, for he had told me in the first days of his reunion with Lillian about the infatuation for me which he said had been at the root of his insane wickedness, but which I thanked heaven had been but a memory for a long time.

"Sorry! Lady Fair," he said with a look at my burning cheeks. "I shouldn't have brought that up. Go on, please exactly as if I hadn't interrupted."

"It's only this." I went on steadily. "In those years when you and Lillian, who never really had loved each other, were so long estranged, Robert Savarin, as you know, came back into her life. He gave her a wonderful devotion, and Lillian mistook the reflowering of her youthful romantic affection for her teacher for a genuine love.

"You mean—Savarin?" he said.

"Yes—only Robert Savarin." I returned steadily. "Remember the tragedy of his life—15 years of mental blindness. Then when he was restored to sanity he found Lillian—gave her the whole love of his life, won her—and lost her, partly because his unreasonable jealousy of everything in her life besides himself made her fear that he might include Marion also in that feeling, and partly, I am sure, because her feeling for you was different and stronger than she herself knew. But whatever was the reason, he lost her. From your own feeling for her, you ought to know what he has undergone since."

He was silent for a little space, then his answer came ungrudgingly.

"Yes, poor devil! I know."

"He never has written her, or sent her any word of him since the day of their parting," I went on. "But he is dying, or near it. He says the doctors tell him that he only has a short span of life left, and he wishes Lillian to feel that he has no rancor toward her—I imagine—though she never has told me anything about it—that he was bitter and resentful at their parting. And —Harry—he has sent her the most wonderful portrait of Marion. He painted it from sketches of the child he drew when we were all at his sister's home in the Catskills, and intended to give it to her upon their wedding day."

I watched Harry Underwood warily as I told him this. He had to know the details concerning this gift from dying Robert Savarin to his wife, but I did not know how his hasty temper and his strong jealousy would react to this particular item. But except for a deeper etching of the lines around his mouth, he gave no sign that I was saying anything out of the ordinary.

"Now he sends it to assure her that he goes out of life still loving her, but glad in her happiness with you," I finished stoutly.

"What is all this?" he demanded. "Are you trying to give me reasons why Lil should keep the portrait? I'm not such a swine as that you know. I'm not going to ask her to send it back, nor am I going to refuse to look at it. As far as I'm concerned, she'll never see anything in my manner except genuine admiration—even my limited intellect can appreciate a Savarin picture."

He smiled down at me, and I returned it, but with a hesitation upon which he pounced.

"There's something else," he said. "Out with it!"

"Wait!" I said impetuously. I whirled away from him, and parting the sheets of Robert Savarin's letter, I folded them so that there were only visible the sentences beginning "I have a light arranged so that the picture is always illuminated"—on to the dying man's acceptance of the fact that Lillian's husband would not wish her to come to him. Then I turned back to him.

"There is another picture," I said, "one of Lillian and Marion together which Robert Savarin is keeping until his death, and then has bequeathed to me. He refers to it here in a paragraph which you must read, Harry. You need read nothing more of the letter, but you MUST read that much. There is a reference to you there, which will show you what I am trying to tell you."

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

My daughter, a foolish wife, mendeth her husband's socks and careth for his garments, but leaveth the soothing of his spirit and the keeping of his vanity to others.

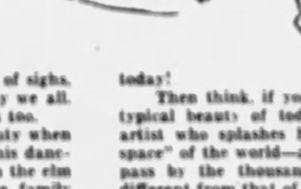
But the wise wife doeth her OWN vamping; and the vamp is her guide, philosopher and pacemaker.



Behold, how simple are the ways of a vamp, and how easily acquired.

Lo, the vamp saith, "I UNDERSTAND thee, beloved!"

But a wife saith, "I see THROUGH thee, Old Dear!"

The vamp pleadeth, "Kiss me again!"

But the wife cryeth, "Don't muss my hair!"

The vamp saith, "I could dance with thee forever!"

But the wife saith, "Keep thy feet off my slippers!"

But the wife saith "Yea, dear, but I have heard that one before."

But the wife saith, "Knowest thou, my beloved, that thou art getting a bald spot on the top of thine head?"

But the wife tittereth, "How FUNNY thou lookest in that hat!"

The vamp saith, "DON'T go home, Darling!"

But the wife saith, "This is a pretty time of night to be coming home!"

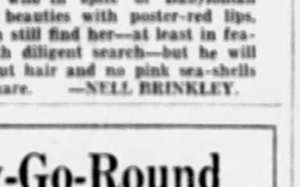
Verily, unto the vamp ALL a man's jokes are funny and all his afflictions are serious; but unto his wife all his jokes are afflictions and most of his afflictions are but jokes.



Therefore do men continue to follow after vamps, and to seek comfort and solace in their company, and WHO shall blame them?

But a wise wife will take lessons of the vamp and will learn to do her OWN vamping!

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Table Silver Arrangement

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Should the arrangement of the forks for a dinner table be such that one starts at the inside, working outward, or vice versa? INTERESTED.

"Vice versa." The silver pieces should be placed on the table in the order in which they are to be used—so that the last one used is the one nearest the plate. "Begin at the outside and work toward the plate" is the usual slogan to remember. That is why the oyster fork is farthest from the plate on the right of the plate, and the soup spoon next, then the entree or fish knife, then the dinner knife, nearest the plate. On the left side of the plate are, first (that is, farthest from the plate), the entree or fish fork, then the dinner fork, and then the salad fork. The utensils for the dessert course (spoon only, or spoon and fork or knife and fork) are usually brought in with the dessert.

A Gift of Friendliness and Welcome

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When the family of the groom to be for the first time, visit the bride to be and her family, do they have to take a gift?

M. T.

No. The only gift they bring is the gift of friendliness and welcome into their family.

Paying One's Own Carfare

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

The other day I was going down town during my lunch hour and my employer's son, who works at the office, also was going. Was it right for me to expect him to pay my carfare?

No, it was not correct for you to "expect" that he should pay your fare. Indeed it would have been the best form if you would have taken for granted that you were to pay your own fare. Unless a girl has been invited by a gentleman to accompany him to a certain place or to certain entertainment, she should take it for granted that she pays her own fare.

The Careless Book Borrower

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

May I ask a somewhat intimate friend for the return of a treasured book she has had a year? Reader.

Yes; this is perfectly proper. Any one who has been so careless as to keep a possession—and a treasured possession, at that—a year will not be oversensitive to such a reasonable request! Write her a little note and tell her quite honestly that you want to welcome back to "port" the little boat that sailed away with her some time ago. She has, of course, just forgotten it, and will be glad to be reminded.

Horoscopes

Sunday, August 10

Sunday's horoscope is a rather adverse one, with the conventional interests of the day under a cloud of confusion and conspiracy. There is a sinister sign from Neptune, which bears rule over all spiritual, mystical and secret relations, although a fair aspect between Jupiter and Mercury may attune the mind to higher activity, thereby precluding chaos and treachery. Be careful with money.

Those whose birthday it is may have a treacherous year to encounter, with affairs sordid and sinister to handle. The mind may be equipped to surmount these menaces, but be careful with funds and guard against all underhand possibilities.

A child born on this day, although having some noble mental qualities and aims, may be disposed to dark and subtle ways, unless given a rigorous training in integrity, honesty and moral stamina.

Monday, August 11

Monday's astrological forecast is a most propitious one, with augury of gain and substantial growth in all new undertakings as well as stability and expansion of established activities. It is a time for pushing toward high goals with diligence, initiative and ambition. But be careful in signing all writings.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of achievement and fulfilled ambitions, whether in new business adventures or in the old established lines. Steady application, industry, as well as fresh initiative, are under splendid rule for growth and stability. It is a time for pushing, but sign all writings with precaution.

A child born on this day should have splendid ability for reaching high goals, with the disposition for hard work as well as new adventure, but a tendency toward craftiness and expediency had best be restrained.

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Green leafy vegetables, rich in mineral salts, are tonic to worn, nervous women. A green salad should be eaten every day. Every day the menu should include a full glass of orange juice, for the sake of the teeth and the intestinal tract. Milk is an excellent food, and should be sipped slowly. Raw carrots, cabbage and celery are complexion aids.

When food is eaten slowly and thoroughly masticated, less energy is required to digest it. Individuals who bolt their chow, rush through a meal at lightning speed, usually take on a larger load than they need, and suffer from a sense of tummy fullness and discomfort. The girl who desires sparkling eyes and a clear complexion must not eat and run.

The face mask of white of egg acts as an astringent. It also is an oil eradicator; laps grease up and clears it from the pores. Beat an egg white slightly, and apply with the finger tips. Include the neck, patting it in gently and spreading out to a thin film. When the egg dries, the skin will feel tight and starched. Lave away with tepid water, following with cold and an astringent.

Foreheads take on expression lines that dig in and are not easily uprooted. Criss-cross furrows are the result of eyebrow lifting, a wholly unnecessary exercise. Frowns come from the bad habit of pulling the eyes together. Squinting produces crows' feet. No use trotting to the beautery and paying out cash-coin-money for facials when these bad habits continue. The serene face is the one that stays young.

BUILDING FOR JULY AHEAD OF JUNE

Volume of Construction Material Shipments Increases Eight Points

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—For the first time since 1927 the volume of construction performed during July, as indicated by last month's shipments of basic construction materials, exceeded that of June, showing a gain of 8 points to Index No. 199, according to a statistical analysis just completed by the Associated General Contractors of America.

The July, 1930, volume, however, was 8 3-5 per cent below that for the corresponding month last year, while the composite index number for the first seven months was 20 points, or 11 3-7 per cent below the comparative index number of 175 for 1929.

HARDING COMMENT

In commenting on the analysis, Edward J. Harding, assistant general manager of the association, pointed out that the July volume more closely approximated that of the corresponding month last year than has that of any month of the current year since March. A continuation of this trend during the next four months, he said, could very nearly offset the decrease of 12 per cent in construction volume reported for the first half of the year.

The association's analysis shows that long term state and municipal bond issues, as reported by The Bond Buyer, averaged $125,000,000 a month during the first half of the year as compared with $116,800,000 per month for the corresponding period of 1929, and that concrete surface pavement awards totaled 82,821,000 square yards, or an increase of 13 per cent as compared with the first six months of 1929.

SOLVENTS HAS NEW PROCESS

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Chemists of Commercial Solvents Corporation have perfected a process whereby rye may be used in place of corn in the production of solvents and other products made by the company, and the new process has been placed in successful operation at the company's plants at Peoria and Terre Haute.

While the company has benefitted considerably by the low price of corn prevailing the first half of the year, utilization of rye in place of corn will effect further important economies in production costs. Rye has been selling in the present market at approximately 30 per cent under prevailing prices for corn, which latter grain has recorded sensational price advances recently, due to the drought situation in the grain belt.

Commercial Solvents Corporation normally consumes approximately 8,000,000 bushels of corn annually as the raw material for its solvents and other products. Approximately 3 per cent more rye than corn is required in the process just perfected, it is understood.

Hardware Demand Continues Moderate

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The current hardware demand is moderate in character, according to reports received from leading market centers, Hardware Age says in its weekly market summary. The majority of dealers appear to have adopted a conservative purchasing policy and are biding their time until the usual mid-summer lull passes. Orders being received generally embrace a wide assortment of merchandise, but the specified quantities of the articles involved are usually small.

The country has lost about $50,000,000 in gold since the middle of July, but there is no evidence of money rates hardening to an extent which would affect investment buying of high-grade securities, according to a study made by Jackson Bros., Boesel & Co. Should gold exports reach substantially larger proportions it is probable that the Federal Reserve banks would step in and offset that influence by the purchase of additional amounts of government securities. For this reason a continuation of easy money rates is expected until the requirements of industry bring about a natural curtailment of the supply of credit.

TRADE SLUMP CONTINUES

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Although general trade continues to sag under the strain of depleted purchasing power during the past few months, increased employment in automobile and textile centers is encouraging and will be reflected over retail counters, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today. Business sentiment is bullish despite the fact that several statistical indicators continue to fall. The business thermometer fell to 86.4 per cent this week, as against 90.5 last week and 114.5 per cent in the corresponding week last year.

The heat wave is exerting a strong influence on business. The drought with the consequent increases in farm commodity prices may yet turn the wholesale commodity price level upward and stimulate advance buying. Most encouraging is a rise in commercial loans, business men are borrowing for fall activity.

Upper Lake Ports Ship Less Iron Ore

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—Iron ore shipments from the upper lake ports were 8,586,649 tons in July against 10,670,822 tons in July, 1929. For the season to date 24,324,222 tons against 32,910,820 last year.

GLASS DEMAND UNDER OUTPUT

The week shows but little activity in the flat glass industry. In a measure the situation is seasonal, although the extremely warm and dry weather may contribute to the inactivity, according to National Glass Budget. Production is running along close to 400,000 boxes per month with demand somewhat below this figure. There is a report that a plant in the Middle West, which has been down for a short period, is scheduled to go into production about the middle of this month. But this increased production should be much more than covered by the usual fall increase in demand.

Jobbers' stocks may be designated as low, but they will no doubt remain so as there is a well established belief that transportation facilities are such that no trouble will be experienced taking care of emergency orders.

It is natural to suppose that the situation will improve as the summer advances, but signs to this effect are not sufficiently bright to create much enthusiasm over fall prospects.

Generally speaking the plate glass business is in practically the same condition. It continues quiet with production slightly curtailed and demand weak. As yet it is too soon to forecast what effect the resumption of automobile plants will have on the plate glass sales. Ordinarily speaking it should help the situation, but how much or how soon is problematical. Those engaged in the business are justified in assuming that any real change must be for the better as it can hardly be any quieter. Similar conditions are believed to cover the rough rolled glass phase of the industry.

Machine Exports Gain During Half

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—United States exports of strictly industrial machinery during June were practically the same, by value, as those for June, 1929, but for the half year reached a total of $132,125,000 or $6,300,000 more than for the corresponding period of last year, Commerce Department reports.

Construction, oil well and oil refining and metal working machinery were most active and made substantial gains which more than offset losses in certain other classes such as steam engines and textile machinery.

E. E. MANSIONS BEING TORN DOWN

People Rapidly Turning Towards Apartments As Convenient Homes

Increasing astonishment is expressed today by Pittsburghers who note the great change taking place in the East End residential district of the city. The sumptuous mansions of a quarter of a century ago are disappearing. The spacious and velvety lawns which surrounded them, maintained at a heavy expense excused only by the pride of ownership, are being cut up. Along with other factors of living, pushed into the catalogue of the cumbersome and unwieldly by the amazing speed of this modern era, the large mansion house is fast disappearing into the limbo of the past.

Without doubt, the most salient factor in bringing about this change has been the development of the high-type apartment residence, of which Schenley Apartments is an outstanding example in this city. The student of the changing times and manner, who seeks to learn where those who once occupied Pittsburgh's elegant mansions now reside, could account for a great many of them by examining the tenant list of this great apartment residential group.

HOUSES 200 FAMILIES

For in Schenley Apartments more than 200 prominent families of Pittsburgh have their permanent residence. Moreover, a great many of these have resided there since this great living group was completed and opened to lease six years ago.

But if a comparison more clearly illustrative than the tenant list were required, it is only necessary in order to fully account for the great change working in the residential district, to imagine the extent of property district that would be covered if the floors of the five immense structures comprising the Schenley group were dissected and laid with the edges in contact so as to make one total area. That would mean at least 50 individual areas, allowing 10 floors to each building, which would range into a considerable community.

WASTED AREA

In making this comparison, however, it is necessary to consider the elimination of all actually unrequired space, such as large grounds about a residence, the many unnecessary rooms and large hallway that once were considered indispensible in the construction of a residence, and consider the space that is actually "livable." For in Schenley Apartments, whether a suite is of three rooms or nine rooms, or even is of the duplex type which extends through two floors of a section of one of the buildings, every foot of space is "livable."

It was once the fashion to have a music room, a sewing room, a reception hall, a parlor which was in use only on occasions, etc. There were wide halls and stairways and back stairways, all contributing to the extraordinary size of the structures which came to be designated as "mansions." The families regularly used but a portion of the rooms. This plan of a home belongs to the days when the Victoria was the stylish family vehicle and a span of high-stepping horses were necessary to complete the ensemble.

Vancouver Rich In Water Power

VANCOUVER, Aug. 9.—Immense water power forces, greater even than those of the St. Lawrence, are said to be present along the coast of British Columbia, in a report of experts to the Provincial Government. It is stated that in addition to the famous Taseka Chilko Homathco falls, with a possible development of 1,200,000 h.p., two other sources of power have been discovered which would bring the possible development of the coast district up to 3,000,000 h. p.

National Dairy Co. Outlook Is Good

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Thomas H. McInnerney, president of National Dairy Products Corp., stated, while it is still too early to forecast results for the second half of the year, earnings are running at about the same rate of gain shown for the first six months.

Commenting on the current prevalent drought and the possibility of shortage of milk and higher prices, Mr. McInngrney pointed out that a rise of a cent in milk prices usually takes place in September, due to decreasing production in the fall. This might be hastened this year, he thought, if the dry weather continued. National Dairy's business has been particularly good in the New York and Eastern sections, he stated, although company's business in some sections of the country has been somewhat affected.

STORE SALES UNDER YEAR AGO

Heat and Lack of Rain Have Lowering Effect On Volume of Trade

High temperatures and lack of rain continue to exert a depressing effect upon the volume of sales at both wholesale and retail, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Department store sales are averaging somewhat lower than a year ago, while the volume of business of the smaller merchants is considerably less than for several years past.

Jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel, dry goods and shoes report buying almost entirely in small amounts and for filling-in purposes. A demand for household goods is light and there is only a moderate demand for hardware. Grocery sales continue somewhat below normal, with prices averaging considerably lower than a year ago.

RADIO SALES GAIN

Demand for lumber and building materials continues quiet, with dwelling house construction materially lower than for several years, and prices are averaging about 25 per cent lower on many grades than they were last year. There is a somewhat improved demand for radios, although electrical equipment lines are somewhat quieter. Manufacturers of sanitary and heating equipment report business quiet, although some improvement is anticipated in the near future.

Crude oil production shows a moderate increase throughout the nation, but Pennsylvania grades are being produced at a lower rate due to the agreement to curtail output.

Not much change is noted in the collection situation, payments to jobbers continuing to average slow.

NATIONAL BANK DEPOSITS UP

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Total resources of 7,252 reporting national banks in the United States June 30 were $29,116,539,000, an increase of $1,768,041,000 since March 27, and of $1,676,311,000 over the amount reported by 7,536 banks June 29, 1929, Comptroller of the Currency J. W. Pole announced.

Loans and discounts amounted to $14,887,752,000, an increase of $238,000,000 since March and $86,622,000 in the year.

National banks increased their holdings of United States securities by $31,098,000 to $2,753,941,000 in the three months. These holdings declined $48,919,000 in a year.

Total deposits were $23,268,884,000, increases of $1,627,906,000 and $1,670,796,000 in the three and 12 month periods. Savings accounts June 30 amounted to $6,070,683,000, making up most of the time deposits. Savings pass-book accounts June 30 numbered 15,974,689.

New Zealand Scans Bid for Oil Rights

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Aug. 9.—Proposal is before Parliament that the New Zealand government enter into an agreement with a British oil firm to form a monopoly in this country's markets to combat American interests.

The foremost American companies marketing oil products in New Zealand are Vacuum Oil Company, Texas Company and, jointly, Atlantic Refining Company and Union Oil Company of California. A number of other companies also send shipments of oil from California to independent importers in New Zealand. Royal Dutch-Shell also markets in New Zealand to an important extent.

Pennsy Complaint Hearing Date Set

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The Interstate Commerce Commission fixed September 5 as the date and Allentown as the place for hearing the complaint filed by the International Motor Company against the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The complainant shipped seven carloads of foundry facings from Charleroi, Irwin, Rilton and Yukon, Pa., to its plant in New Brunswick, N. J., on which the carrier collected $928 freight charges under the fifth classification. The motor company alleges that the freight should have been $700.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

INGOT OUTPUT FOR JULY 56.35%

Trend During Month Was Neither Up Nor Down; Autumn Gain Forecast

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of Bessemer and open-hearth steel ingots in July is officially reported at 2,933,399 tons, representing 112,823 tons daily rate and 56.35 per cent of capacity, thus bearing out with unusual closeness the trade estimates made during the month. There was no visible upward or downward trend during the month, a large drop having occurred at the close of June.

During the first five or six months of the year production was fairly heavy, somewhat above what might have been expected considering the state of general business, and broadly speaking the monthly swings were of seasonal character. July did not continue the showing in either respect, and presented a poor appearance. The July rate was 18 per cent under June, 34 per cent under February, the high month, and 27 per cent under the first half average.

LARGE SLUMP

The drop to July was an unusually large one and indicates rather clearly that views as to steel in this year as a whole should be revised. If buyers all down the line to manufactured steel wares have been conservative, the summer drop should be less than usual, for the theory has been that summer declines in steel production have been due in part to summer requirements being covered in advance, to facilitate vacations. If buyers have not been conservative a bill of excesses has been accumulated and must be paid.

It is idle to attempt to forecast the future unless views as to what occurred in the past, and why, have been set in order in accordance with the latest information available. It is necessary now to go back to early in the year. During the first six weeks steel demand was increasing and at a remarkable rate. February production was only 9 per cent under the first half average of 1929 and was 7 per cent above the first half average of 1928. At the time, some steel makers made no secret of the fact that demand and production were surprisingly large, and they felt that one of two things was the case, either the steel pace was too strong to last, or general business conditions were not nearly as poor as was supposed. We now know quite well enough that the second alternative is eliminated.

AUTUMN IMPROVEMENT

The best conjecture as to why steel assumed a pace it could not maintain is that there was momentum left over from the previous very strong pace of general trade. Instead of the stock market collapse putting a deep crimp in business, which month by month would be smoothed out, a major influence was left, the decline in general activity beginning about July 1, 1929, after an unusual burst.

It is correct in a way, but superficial, to say that something fresh has gone wrong. It is accurate to say that something existing underneath has now worked its way out into action, or rather inaction, and is being reflected in the statistics. There is perhaps an even chance that prognostications of an autumn improvement in steel will be borne out, but if so they must be weighed to appraise the probable importance of such improvement.

Inventor Wins Suit On Steel Patents

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Federal Judge Fitz Henry, at Springfield, Ill., ruled that Andrew Frank Howe, inventor and former employe of Commonwealth Steel Company, is entitled to an accounting from that company for use of two of his patents. A master in chancery has been appointed to estimate the amount due to Howe, which, according to Joseph T. Davis, counsel for Howe, is sure to amount to several million dollars. The subjects on which infringement is claimed consist of a mold capable of casting in one piece very large metal castings, and an improved sandmill.

The company was practically absorbed by General Steel Castings Corporation in 1929.

Manhattan Borough Building Increases

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Construction in the Borough of Manhattan continues on the up-grade, last month's total exceeding that of the same month last year. This is the first time during the current year that the monthly volume has run ahead of 1929. During July plans and specifications were filed for 45 new buildings to be erected at an estimated cost of $33,455,700, a figure more than double that of June and $15,967,155 in excess of April, the previous high month of 1930.

Liberty Dairy Merger Agreement Made

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

TENTATIVE TERMS HAVE been agreed upon for the consolidation of Liberty Dairy Products Corporation of Pittsburgh with the Beatrice Creamery Company of Chicago through an exchange of stock. Negotiations between the two companies during the last six months have terminated in a proposal from the Beatrice Creamery Company which is to be acted upon by stockholders of the Liberty Dairy Products Corporation at a special meeting August 18, 1930. The Pittsburgh company will continue to operate as the Liberty Dairy Products Corporation under the same management.

Liberty Dairy Products Corporation was formed in Pittsburgh, through the efforts of Moore, Leonard & Lynch, in 1928, as a merger of Ohio and Pittsburgh Milk Company, trading as Hermes-Groves Dairy Company, Shadyside Milk Company, Reinhold Ice and Ice Cream Company and Kittanning Pure Milk Company. The consolidation brought together the principal independent distributors of milk and ice cream products in the Pittsburgh district. It cut down greatly overhead expenses on the volume of business of the four separate companies and it eliminated a large amount of duplicate service where two or more of the individual companies had routes covering the same territory.

Terms Decided

TERMS TENTATIVELY AGREED upon are an exchange, share for share, of Beatrice Creamery $7 preferred stock for Liberty Dairy first and second preferred or $105 in cash for each share of Liberty first and second preferred, this being the call price.

The basis of exchange of the common stocks of the two companies will be 82,392 shares of Liberty for 23,541 shares of Beatrice with 1,400 shares of the latter stock held in escrow subject to the final audits and arrangements made between the two companies.

Liberty common, at present, pays no dividend while the common stock of Beatrice Creamery is on an annual rate of $4 per share. The closing price August 8 for Beatrice Creamery was 80. The preferred stock of Beatrice closed at 105½. Beatrice Creamery common has sold as high as 92 and as low as 67½ on the New York Stock Exchange this year. On the present basis it is estimated Beatrice Creamery will earn $10 per share this year.

The Liberty company has been in operation for over a year. Late last year the Harmony Creamery Company was acquired.

Second Preferred Sold

LIBERTY DAIRY PRODUCTS Corporation had total assets of $3,385,626 on April 30, 1930. The surplus amounted to $1,846,033. At that time there were outstanding 8,740 shares of first preferred stock. Second preferred amounting to 3,531 shares was sold during 1930 to customers. At that time 82,392 shares of common were outstanding. The company did a business of about $5,750,000 in the year ending April 30, 1930.

Beatrice Creamery Company is one of the largest dairy companies in the United States and has had a long and successful record of development and expansion. The business was originally founded in 1891 and the present company was incorporated in 1924.

No Funded Debt

THE COMPANY HAS NO funded debt. The balance sheet February 28, 1930, showed total assets of $25,932,672. At that time there were 73,210 shares of $7 preferred stock and 270,395 shares of common stock outstanding. The common at that time had a book value of $56.06 per share. The range in price of the common stock this year was from a high of 92 to a low of 67½.

Net sales of the Beatrice Creamery Company in the last 10 years have shown a steady increase from about $35,000,000 in 1921 to approximately $83,000,000 in the year ended February 28, 1930. Total assets have increased from approximately $11,000,000 in 1921 to almost $26,000,000 this year. Net income has increased from $900,000 in 1921 to almost $2,500,000. Earnings on common stock have varied from approximately $6 to $10 per share. Earnings per share have not been below $6 since 1924 and in the year ending February 28, 1930, amounted to $7.43. It is interesting to note that, while net sales increased 59 per cent from 1928 to 1930, the net income during the same period rose 103 per cent.

CROWN MEET POSTPONED

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Charles E. McManus, president of Crown Cork and Seal Company, announced that the meeting of directors called for August 7 to consider the declaration of a dividend on the common stock had been postponed, due to lack of a quorum of directors. Mr. McMcManus said an effort would be made to get a quorum for a meeting on next Friday, but that in any event such a meeting would be held in the near future.

The report carried by a news bureau that the meeting had been "indefinitely postponed" was inaccurate, Mr. McManus declared. The same report said that the directors declared the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred stock Thursday when as a matter of fact this dividend was declared at a meeting held in New York, where all directors' meetings are held, on July 3.

TRIPLEX MAKES NEW PRODUCT

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Officials of the Triplex Safety Glass Company of North America announced that the company was beginning production, at the Clifton (N. J.) plant, of laminated glass similar to that used in making non-shatterable windshields, in color and design. The perfected process makes possible the use of any design for a number of decorative uses.

The new product seals any desired design or color between two sheets of glass, thus rendering it immune to damage from any cause. The product will be marketed for wall plaques, table or desk tops, soda fountains, picture frames and as a substitute for marble.

STORAGE HOUSE MEETS PUBLIC DEMAND

Many Changes Take Place In Warehouse Service; Vaults for Valuables

Rapid changes have taken place in the service expected of furniture storage warehouses in recent years. A short time ago a building divided into small compartments was all that was required to meet public demand. Today an elaborate plant is necessary with several highly specialized departments. The recently completed furniture storage plant of Edward Werner, 1917 Brownsville road, offers an example of the most recent developments in its field.

A vault equipped with safety deposit boxes for silver and adequate space for the storage of other valuables has been provided. A special room, which is kept at a constant temperature, has been set aside for piano storage. Adequate facilities have been installed for the protection of furniture from moths.

SEPARATE ROOMS

Separate rooms have been constructed to insure complete safety for exceptionally valuable furniture. Steel racks have been installed, which are especially designed for holding over-stuffed furniture so that each piece is free from contact with other articles to avoid the possibility of any harm to upholstery. The entire building is protected by automatic sprinklers. The warehouse has a supply of smocks which can be worn by women to protect their clothes while inspecting goods in storage.

Edward Werner started in business 23 years ago with a single horse and wagon. The greatest progress in the success of his business has been shown in the last seven years.

LABOR, CAPITAL TO CONFER

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Labor and capital in Massachusetts may join hands in an effort to bring about more prosperous conditions in the textile industry.

The suggestion to bring together leaders of labor groups and outstanding men in the textile industry was made by Gen. E. Leroy Sweetser, state commissioner of labor and industries, at a conference between leaders of the wool and cotton industry and the Massachusetts Industrial Commission.

Means to lighten the burden of taxation on textile plants and means to bring about more continuous employment in the various plants are the two paramount objectives.

Gen. Sweetser's suggestion was approved by the mill men at the meeting and also by Thomas O. O'Hare, labor member of the commission.

GENERAL TRADE SHOWS DROP

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Business for the week ended August 2, as measured by bank debits outside New York City, declined from the week ended July 26, and was lower than the same period in 1929.

Wholesale prices, as a whole, remained at the same level of a week ago, but were 16 per cent lower than the corresponding week of 1929. The prices for iron and steel, as measured by the composite index, likewise showed no change from last week, but, like wholesale prices, were lower than a year ago.

Bank loans and discounts as reported to the Federal Reserve Board by member banks, although greater than the previous week, were below the level of the same period a year ago. Average stock prices showed no change from the week of July 26, but were lower when compared with the same period last year. Bond prices, however, registered increases over both comparative periods. Interest rates, both for short and long-term loans, were the same as the preceding period, but were much lower when compared with the week of August 3, 1929. Business failures during the last week were fewer than the week ended July 26.

OVER-OPTIMISM WARNING IS SOUNDED

Genuine Prosperity Based On Attuning Production To Conservative Demand

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Prosperity, of course, cannot be built on sentiment alone, but economic fundamentals are reshaping themselves in a manner that invites greater optimism, at least according to the view of some competent administrators.

Putting into practice Dwight Morrow's aphorism that just as 1929 was a year for caution, 1930 is a year for optimism, Edward E. Shumaker, president of RCA-Victor Inc., asking dealers to discard pessimism as business has undertaken to talk and act prosperity.

Mr. Rukeyser

He says:

"Overproduction has been absorbed and the ball of enlarged business activity will start rolling shortly. The working people of the country have substantial savings accounts. Give them work, or the assurance of work, and they will start spending part of those savings. The RCA-Victor company is going to start something. We are going to run our plant at capacity until it is proven that we are wrong."

OVER-OPTIMISM WARNING.

Perhaps the time is propitious for setting a new fashion in confidence in trade. Over-optimism, however, should be guarded against. Genuine prosperity will depend on attuning production to demand, not on excessive output.

A shrewd analyst in New York said that completed buildings would tend to resist the deflationary process, but he indicated that there might be some temporary downward revision in land values.

The prevailing quietude in Wall street is relative. Though sales are absolutely larger than prevailed eight years ago, Wall street is over-equipped for the present volume of trade. Though the stock exchange may piously seek to restrain customers' men, the truth is that brokerage facilities are geared up for large speculative markets, not for ordinary quiet investment absorption.

In the midst of the general deflation, it is to be wondered whether brokerage rates, the highest in the history of the exchange, are too high. They went into effect at the eve of the last bull market, and during the emotional excitement they apparently placed no brakes on activity. In present desultory markets, the high commission rates constitute a hardship and restrain outside quick trading. Yet even now it can hardly be considered a major factor.

BROKERS' RATES HIGH

Even members of the exchange who pay no commissions, find it difficult to profit from trading these dull days. The prevailing quietude is a result of a deadlock between economic slackness, on the one hand, and the deflated position of the market and general technical strength on the other.

Experience shows that unanimity of opinion rarely persists in Wall Street. Differences of opinion are the stuff out of which horse races and stock markets are made. The trading community will not sit by and wait for positive proof that prosperity has returned, but will doubtless experimentally make further false bull starts before the country is ready for another major upswing.

As Paris continues to suck in additional gold, outside economists are unimpressed with the official attitude of the Bank of France that it has been passive in the matter. There is something of national temperament in gold policies.

France always liked to accumulate the yellow metal, whereas England, the world banker, was ever free to let gold go on demand. Gold is a non-earning asset when held in a central bank, and a country can pay too much for mere prestige.

By intelligent international management of the world monetary gold supply, it should be feasible to offset the evil effects on trade of a prospective shortage in future output of the metal. However, if some of the outstanding countries decline to play ball and hoard gold needlessly, there may conceivably be a rebirth of the demand for bimetalism, the issue on which the late William Jennings Bryan first captured the attention of the country.

It is to be hoped that the academic struggle need not be waged again, but there is a responsibility on the part of central bank managers to handle the gold supply discreetly. Sir Josiah Stamp and others hope that the new bank for international settlements will be an instrument for co-ordinating world needs in respect to gold.

Lake Soft Coal Loadings Down

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—Bituminous coal loaded into vessels at Lake Erie ports in week ended August 4 totaled 1,332,783 tons, against 1,283,781 tons in like 1929 week; season to August 4, totaled 20,209,890 tons, against 19,886,674 in like 1929 period.

BIG CONSUMERS PURCHASING RUBBER

Tire Companies Stock Up In Anticipation of Rally From Present Low Prices

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—While current record low prices for crude rubber undoubtedly spell large inventory losses for American tire manufacturers and other consumers of rubber, such losses for the time being are considered as paper losses. When the time for inventory-taking rolls around at the end of 1930, the price situation may present an entirely different aspect. In the meantime, some tire makers have been taking advantage of recent low prices for the commodity to cover their reasonable requirements in some instances as far ahead as the middle of 1931. Instead of considering possible losses at present prices, they are figuring the possibilities of profits in advantageous buying of crude rubber at what they consider an unusually favorable price level.

PRICE AT RECORD LOW

Continuing its decline of the past several weeks, the price of crude rubber last week and again on Wednesday reached new low territory with transactions at 9.90 cents a pound for August, the lowest price on record. Although weakness in crude rubber is generally attributed to the declines and unsettled conditions in other raw commodity markets, the immediate influences working for recent lower prices have been a lack of demand for consumption from American tire companies and other rubber consumers which use the bulk of the world's supplies, as well as the failure of the British and Dutch governments to act on some form of restriction of output.

PRESENT MARKET "FREE"

Since the Stevenson plan was removed by the British in November, 1928, there has been a free market in the commodity which has moved in accordance with the laws of supply and demand. The recent decline, although not unusual in view of the world-wide depression which exists in practically all other commodity markets, has again raised hopes among the advocates of restrictive measures that some plan would be undertaken to apply artificial remedies to stimulate prices.

STOCKS SLUMP UNDER SHARE SELLING

Pivotal Shares Droop Under Renewed Pressure; Steel Loses Fractionally

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP.) — Stocks encountered further selling pressure at the opening of today's market, but yesterday's sharp decline failed to cause any huge accumulation of overnight selling orders.

American Telephone rallied a point, and American Can was steady. Radio and Commercial Solvents sagged ¼ with transactions of 5,000 shares. A block of 6,000 shares of Vanadium sold 2 points down. Southern Railway, New York Central, Radio Keith, Standard of California, John Manville and Westinghouse Electric lost 1 to 1¾.

U. S. Steel opened with a block of 1,400 shares, off ⅜.

The market sold off rapidly during the first half hour, rallying tendencies which appeared in a few isolated issues during the first few minutes of trading quickly disappeared, signs of support were almost entirely lacking, selling appeared in increasing volume and the ticker soon fell a few minutes behind floor transactions.

Such recent pool favorites as Vanadium and Houston Oil dropped 4 points. New York Central sold off 3. Warner Brothers tumbled more than 2 to another new low. U. S. Steel, American Can, Sears Roebuck, Westinghouse Electric, North American, American and Foreign Power and United Aircraft lost about 2. Shares selling off a point or more included General Motors, Radio, Loews, Fox, Air Reduction, Borden, Dupont, Bethlehem, Erie and Canada Dry.

Some professional traders were said to be buying stock on the way down in the hope of a sharp technical rally, in view of the large short interest. The short interest has become so large that some 100 stocks are lending "flat," which means that the borrower is willing to forego interest on the money which he deposits with the lender.

Foreign exchanges were steady, with sterling cables opening at $4.87⅛, up 1-32.

Midwest Refining Gets New Producer

DENVER, Aug. 9.—The Midwest Refining completed Byers well in section 9-19-38 Hoobs Pool, Lea County, New Mexico, flowing 10,000 barrels a day. Location is one and one-half miles southeast of nearest producer.

Reading Company Loadings Slump

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Freight and coal loaded on lines and loaded cars received from connections of the Reading Company for July amounted to 171,777 cars against 195,604 in July, 1929, a decrease of 23,827 cars.

VETS ADVANCE IN BATTLE OF JOHNSTOWN

Blue Ridge's Ex-Soldiers Fight It Over Again at Division's 11th Reunion

"This is a swell war," confided Capt. Vincent Smith, of Greensburg, along about midnight, "The swellest war I was ever in and I don't care who knows it."

The gnats are bothering Ed Doty, one of Capt. Smith's Greensburg neighbors — yessir, they got bigger gnats up here than we ever saw down in our hills, Mr. Doty affirmed.

H. A. McClaren is proud of Company F, 318th Infantry, so proud, in fact, that he has attended every reunion since 1918. And Pvt. McClaren carries his reunion badges with him to prove it—all of them.

Gus Pannier who looks after the city parks in Pittsburgh when not attending 80th Division reunions, came in all out of breath today. The drouth, he tells his buddies, is getting bad.

Capt. Carlo D. Cella, of New York, found some of his old command from the 305th Ammunition Train mighty glad to see him upon his arrival today. "Oh, how becoming, captain, is that gray hair of yours," one of the boys rose to remark.

And, by the way, those bucks who were rumored "laying" for Col. W. H. (Buck) Waldron's reception were very nice about it when the Colonel paraded into headquarters today. "Attention," somebody ordered. "At rest, men; at rest." The Colonel smiled affably and the boys just crowded round.

John F. Garey, Frank P. Egglehouse and Frank Casteriviler, the Latrobe wrecking crew, are here. Three busted chairs and two smashed straw hats were found in headquarters today.

George Cordes, the New York contribution of the 305th Ammunition Train, spent the afternoon golfing and the evening busting balloons from atop the Altoona "Hommes 40, Chevaux 8" in the parade.

Capt. Gerald P. Miles, of the 305th Engineers, lays claim to fame by reason of the fact that he instituted manual-of-arms training at the Southern Military Academy, Los Angeles. Oh, yes, the Captain is here.

Frank P. Dingis came down from Buffalo to tell the world that if he finds himself mixed up in another war his only hope is that he is made a corporal. And as long as there are reunions, Mr. Dingis says, he'll be on hand to supply the badges. Yes, he sells 'em.

80TH VETS SET FOR ELECTION

the day to a close, with all Johnstown and its environs turning out en masse for the street parade, which wound up in the Stadium, where nearly 30 American Legion drum and bugle corps vied in competitive drill.

Latrobe Post, American Legion, was awarded first honors in the drill, with the Central City corps coming in second. Indiana was awarded third, honorable mention. In the parade, Central City took first, with Salisburg second; Indiana, third, and Windber fourth. To Lilly went the honors of the best band.

FIREWORKS FOLLOW

A program of fireworks followed the drill competition, after which the veterans were feted at a ball in the public auditorium until the "wee hours."

The serious business of selection of the 1931 convention city is in the hands of a committee of which James Farrar, of Richmond, Va., has been named chairman by National Commander Oscar C. Mulhollen.

By reason of Mulhollen's appointment of Farrar, Richmond is considered a strong contender for next year's reunion, although a delegation of Pittsburgh veterans is on hand with letters of invitation from Mayor Charles H. Kline, the Chamber of Commerce and other officials.

There have been three of the 11 reunions in Pittsburgh and only one in Richmond. The first in 1920, was held in the Virginia city. Pittsburgh was host to the veterans in 1921, '24 and '27. In 1922 the boys of the 80th gathered in Charleston; in '23 they met in Norfolk; Clarksburg claimed them in '25. Conneaut is making a strong bid for next year's reunion, as also are Wheeling, W. Va., Atlantic City, Detroit and several other cities and towns in the Tri-state district.

HAS PLENTY OF TIME

The committee charged with the selection of next year's reunion city has until next year to do it and, according to Chairman Farrar and several of his members, there is a strong possibility that if no early agreement is reached among the committeemen, the matter may be held over until a later date.

In the matter of the selection of new officers, the nomination committee members under Henry L. Cannon, Cambria County's comptroller, got busy early today. They are expected to lay before the reunion delegates this today, a full slate of officers from national commander down.

There are three strong contenders for commander, W. T. Bonsall, of Philadelphia; J. J. [illegible]den, of Pittsburgh, and Boyd [illegible]Stutler, of Charleston, W. Va. Both Bonsall and Stutler are present vice commanders. Madden is commander of Gen. Lloyd M. Brett Post in Pittsburgh.

JUDGE D. PAULSON FOSTER JERRY J. MADDEN FATHER EDWARD WALLACE

What About 80th? Here's Facts

In the following questions and answers may be found frank discussion of some of the questions touched on lightly during the days of 1917-18-19.

Col. Jennings C. Wise, who answers the queries, is author of two notable war books, "Turn of the Tide" and "The Great Crusade," the latter a virtual history of the 80th Division. Col. Wise served through, from Camp Lee to Nantillois—and beyond. He was battalion commander and later, at G. H. Q., had unusual opportunity to gain a great perspective of the A. E. F. and its work.

Well, was the 80th any good—how good? Read on:

Q.—What was the actual G. H. Q. rating of the Eightieth Division as a combat unit? Why?

A.—I know of no attempt to give the divisions a relative rating while I was at G. H. Q. except as combat and replacement units. We may arrive at the consensus of opinion, however, by the induction process of reasoning:

1—The division was never seriously threatened with being relegated to a replacement category.

2—It was pooled in reserve at St. Mihiel, though new on the American front. The reserve is a most important post.

4—On September 29, it was pulled out of the line where it had achieved its mission, to be sent to the support of the Thirty-seventh Division in another corps where a serious counter-attack was threatening, in preference to the Thirty-third Division on its right.

5—It was used as a shock unit to take the Bois des Ogons following the previous efforts of the Seventy-ninth, Fourth and Third Divisions.

6—It was given a vital mission at the center of the attack with the Second, in the Third Phase on November 1.

7—It was the only division in the A. E. F. employed in all three phases of the Meuse-Argonne.

8—Both its commander and the commander of the assault brigade on November 1 were complimented in special orders by the new corps commander.

10—Gen. Bullard later (in April) gave the division a belated but highly complimentary testimonial.

11—The artillery brigade was generally recognized as very capable. Gen. Allen commanding the Ninetieth Division, with which it served to the end, gave it a high indorsement.

14—Its communications on September 26 were used by the divisions on both its right and left, in fact for the whole corps.

15—It was called on in the midst of performing its own mission to furnish both artillery and a regiment of infantry to the Fourth Division on its left, September 26.

18—Its signal companies were alone able to establish communications west of the Meuse in the entire corps on the 26th.

Q.—In what ways, if any, was the division unique?

A.—In that it brought together the sons of Federal and Confederate veterans at Petersburg and Richmond—the capital of the Confederacy—and showed them all good men are the same. It did much to end narrow sectionalism born of ignorance.

It was the first division to send out of a cantonment an armed body of troops of the National army when it sent a composite battalion under me to parade in Richmond.

Its intelligent attitude toward the large Negro contingent at Camp Lee was marked. Not a single untoward incident occurred.

It had the finest artillery and infantry target ranges of any combat division.

It instituted a great newspaper—The Bayonet—whose founder, Lieut. (afterward Lieut. Col.) Guy T. Vikniskki, later established and directed the Stars and Stripes of the A. E. F.

Q.—What were its strongest points when compared with the rest of the A. E. F.?

A.—The broad vision of its commanding general and the extraordinary energy of its chief-of-staff.

Its organization into territorial units—Pennsylvania in the One Hundred and Sixtieth Infantry Brigade and the Three Hundred and Fifth Engineers; Virginia, in the One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Brigade; West Virginia, in the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth Artillery Brigade. This inspired a healthy rivalry with all the advantages of a sense of responsibility among officers and men to their people.

Q.—What were its weakest points?

A.—The frequency of changes among unit commanders after reaching France for which the division command was not responsible.

Several poor regimental commanders were not relieved when they should have been. This was due to a desire to make the best of available material.

Promotion of officers was not pressed as strongly as in other units, chiefly because the command was thinking about other things and consequently did not realize the situation.

It was very weak on self-advertisement.

The command also adopted the fixed policy of not playing politics at G. H. Q., as some other units did. These were virtues but weaknesses at the same time.

Q.—There have been rumors that G. H. Q., felt that the Eightieth did not accomplish all that was expected of it. Have you heard these rumors? On what were they based? Were they true?

A.—Never heard any such thing. I did hear it was believed the division was not friendly enough with the British and was not popular with the British high command.

This was also the attitude of Second Corps Headquarters on the British Front. There Gen. Cronkhite resolutely refused to violate Gen. Pershing's express desires that American troops engage in no offensive operations. Because he would not permit this as did other division commanders, the British may have deemed him hostile to them.

But I think it has no other or better foundation unless it was the general's just complaint that the area first assigned the division at Samer had not ample facilities and accommodations; that British units were unduly favored.

Q.—Were any of the spy stories at Camp Lee true? (The one about the traveling lecturers, etc.). Can you relate the authentic ones?

A.—I heard none. I left there early in December, 1917, one of the two first officers to go to France.

Q.—What was the method and organization by which men in the ranks did counter-espionage work?

A.—I was not advised. All I know is that at Camp Lee I was called on by the judge advocate general to furnish the names of reliable men for this work.

Q.—Was a single member of the division ever accused (formally) of disloyalty or cowardice, and punished for the offense?

A.—I do not know. I know there were suspects. I myself tried to have one officer brought to trial for cowardice but was prevailed on not to file charges unless proof was water tight. So I charged him with embezzlement and deserting his command. He was tried three times. Each time the court acquitted him. Finally the division commander dissolved the court because it ignored the evidence and in a general order characterized it as a menace instead of an aid to discipline.

Q.—Did any member of the division know, upon embarkation, to what European port the outfits were going?

A.—Undoubtedly the division commander and chief of staff knew, or suspected, because Gen. Cronkhite had been to France and knew where the combat units were being received.

Q.—Why was the division pulled out of the British area so suddenly? (Some units of the Three Hundred Nineteenth had that night marched up to relieve a British unit near Arras, and then were marched back again.)

A.—Because when the line on the Aisne became stabilized, Gen. Pershing was assigned the approximate date for the battle of St. Mihiel, which he had been preparing since late July (See Turn of the Tide, Wise). The division was operating under the administrative order of the Second Corps (U. S.), but the actual direction of the British corps to which it was assigned for training. Naturally the latter knew nothing of the American G. H. Q. plans. The concentration in the American sector had to be rapid and secret.

Q.—Why was the division one of the nine to launch the attack of September 26?

A.—Because it had its own artillery, was fresh, and had had some experience on the British front.

Q.—Did the division do as well as it was expected to do?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Why was it so difficult to get G. H. Q. reports corrected to show that the division was first on the army objective?

A.—Bjornstadt (Third Corps chief of staff) perhaps, and Bullard (Third Corps commander) and the natural tendency of opposing changes.

Q.—Were the German guns on the right bank given any attention by corps or army—or, as our infantrymen believed, simply not bothered?

A.—Were given all the attention the corps and army artillery could give them.

Q.—WHERE WERE OUR PLANES?

A.—Had none to speak of.

Q.—Wasn't the artillery brigade commander relieved? Because of what incident?

A.—He was relieved by the personal order of Gen. Cronkhite. Whether he ever went to Blois, or not, I do not know. A subsequent investigation returned him to duty. General Cronkhite was very fond of him. It almost broke his heart to have to relieve him. He did not pursue the matter vigorously. The reason for his relief was his failure to get up his ammunition for the attack of September 26. He did not know where it was when called upon to explain. The chief-of-staff had to get it up. The morning of the 25th found some of his batteries not in position to engage in the barrage. Pershing had demanded that they all be in place by the 25th. If when he visited the line on that date he had found them not in position he would probably have held Gen. Cronkhite responsible.

Q.—Why were good officers—like Cocheu, Obear, etc., sent to school in the midst of the offensive, when they were so sorely needed for the next month, anyhow?

A.—The General Staff scheme of education was inflexible. It recognized no needs on the part of the combat units because to keep the school going there must be a constant flow of students. This was especially true of the General Staff College. The third course ended September 30. The fourth commenced October 1st. Some one had to go. Only good men were wanted. They had no choice. Neither did the division commander.

(Concluded Tomorrow)

What About the Blue Ridge Division?

Was higher command hyper-critical of the division?
Why were there so few maps?
Were Gen. Cronkhite and Gen. Bullard at odds?

Read the answers to these questions and many others, EXCLUSIVELY IN THE SUN-TELEGRAPH TODAY AND SUNDAY, in a questionnaire answered by Col. Jennings C. Wise.

Col. Wise knows what he writes about. Ex-commandant of V. M. I., battalion commander throughout the campaign, attached to G. H. Q.'s Historical Section afterward, author of two notable war books, he has a grasp of things military, and an astonishing frankness. His latest book, "The Great Crusade," is a virtual history of the division.

MISS HARD-BOILED

Pauline Warns Raquel Against Alphonse

CHAPTER XXII.

After the mysterious letter from Farrell, a mystery solved by Raquel to her satisfaction, she dismissed any idea of immediate departure from the Hotel Brixton. She would be safe there for at least a week longer. And she had come to know that the entire scheme of one's life may be changed in a week.

As it turned out, there was no need for her to have worried at all. At the end of the week, she was sailing for Paris. Alphonse had secured passage for himself and two of his models—Raquel and a girl named Greta Tosak. The two remaining models of the four were to follow. Raquel had not seen Greta Tosak. She wondered if Greta were beautiful. More beautiful, perhaps, than she?

They were to sail on a ship named the Gloire de France.

Raquel liked repeating the name to herself. It had a smooth quality. Like fine silk.

"There will be many of our clients on the ship," Alphonse explained to Raquel. "We must show them the most chic and original creations for ocean travel."

"We are to have an exhibition on the ship?" asked Raquel, thrilled at the prospect of such an opportunity.

"A continuous one for the crossing," Alphonse assured her. "Not a formal exhibition. It is simply that you and Miss Greta will appear always in the ensemble that is proper and smart for the occasion. Never the same twice. The eyes of our clients will be watching. We must please, make them greedy to follow."

Recalls Past

"But I have only the black satin, and the gown of silver for the ball and—" No need to add the old green dress hung out of sight in a closet. That woman who got her to go to the night club lied about its being becoming.

"I would prefer that you take nothing personal. Return the black dress to the shop. One of the helpers in the workroom may find use for it. As for the silver one.... perhaps we should include it among our evening numbers. I doubt if we will find another more expressive of you."

"Then I shall bring nothing," Raquel said, "except a pair of coral earrings."

Lucy's earrings. She had forgotten them until this moment. Strange that they should dangle before her eyes, suddenly, as if they had materialized out of the air. Two small coral roses that nestled against the lobe of the ear and served as anchors for six coral leaves, three to each rose, swung on thin gold chains. The two longest chains almost touched Raquel's shoulders.

Alphonse gave her a searching look. How did the coral earrings thouch this girl's past? What memories did they call from behind the closed door he did not choose to open?

Raquel read his question.

"They belong, that is they once belonged, to my mother," she said softly.

Alphonse took her hand, pressed it warmly.

Identity Secret

"There will be a particular gown," he said, "for the coral earrings."

"Well, one problem was settled. She would not have to offer explanation at the hotel. Not even awaken a suspicion that she was leaving. She would pay her bill at the end of the week, in the customary way. That would be Saturday morning. She would be wearing the black satin dress, and she would walk out just as if she were going for a walk instead of to Chez Alphonse, and from there to Paris. The ship sailed at midnight.

No one in the hotel knew she was a model, that she was employed by the exclusive firm of Alphonse, Fifth avenue. They could tell Farrell nothing. He would not be able to trace her.

But if she disappeared, simply sank out of sight, Farrell would think she had come to some harm. He would be frantic. Call in the police.

Besides, she owed him money. The loan he had made her. He would not consider that, of course. He would think only of her.

"I'll tell him the truth," she decided. "He will come straight to the hotel for me. Instead he will find a note into which I will put the $200 from Alphonse's check. There will be 200 of the debt then remaining. This I will send him as soon as it is earned."

That evening Raquel sat down at her desk to compose the letter that was later to burn itself into the mind and the heart of the rollicking Irishman, Jack Farrell, like a branding-iron into the quivering flesh of a roped steer.

It was the most difficult task she had ever undertaken. How would she begin? "Dear Jack?" "Hombre mio?" "Amigo?"

She decided on "Amigo." It was sufficiently noncommital. It was true.

Someone was at her door. She rose impatiently. The woman standing there was Madame Pauline.

Or was it? The change in the woman was shocking. All the fire had gone out of her. She sagged. Her face was haggard. She seemed old.

"You are going away with him?" More a whimper than a question.

Raquel drew the woman into the room and closed the door.

"Sit down, Madame," she said, offering a chair. "I do not know why you have come, but if I can be of service——"

"Of service?" The woman clutched at Raquel's sleeve. "You have my life in your hands. Everything. Every-t-h-i-n-g——" Her voice sank until it was barely audible.

"If you will calm yourself, Madame, and tell me what it is you want." Raquel knew she must be cool, casual. This woman was on the verge of collapse, or worse.

"Do not go away with Alphonse, I beg, I pray. You are beautiful. Young. You have all of life before you. Men—you can have them. By a nod, a smile. You do not love him—Alphonse, I know. I can feel—"

Refuses Request

"Madame, you behave—why you act like a child. Of a certainly I do not love Alphonse."

"Yet you go with him—"

"I do not go with Alphonse. I work for him. I am a model like the others. Miss Greta—"

"No, no. It is different with you. He sees you. Your beauty—it has taken possession of him. He worships it—beauty. You do not understand."

Raquel walked to the mirror. Was it true? Had this woman spoken the truth? Could beauty run in the blood, coil itself around the heart? She knew that it could. It was in her blood, best in her heart.

"I too was beautiful once." That dry rattle in the woman's throat. "He worshiped beauty in me—"

Raquel turned, studied the woman's face. Yes, even now there were traces of beauty. Faded wisps. Then why was this woman here, whining? Why hadn't she made the most of what was hers? If she had failed, should she ask failure of her, Raquel, too? No. It was not fair.

"I regret, Madame," Raquel said in a tone at once businesslike and determined, "that I cannot do as you wish. No good of it could come to you. And much harm would come to me. If you have lost beauty, if M. Alphonse no longer finds in you that which he seeks, whatever I may do can make no difference. He will find beauty elsewhere."

The woman's face went gray. Hysterical, frenzied with the pain of loss as she was, she realized this girl had spoken the truth.

"You are hard—hard—" she whimpered.

"No, Madame, I am honest. Cruel, perhaps. In the end, it is better that way. The hurt is the sooner finished."

It was midnight before Raquel could persuade Madame Pauline to leave her room, to go away quietly. With the distraught woman went the girl's assurance that there was not the remotest chance she would ever be more than a medium for the expression of Alphonse's artistry.

Man Hurt as Two Trolleys Collide

A man was injured and other passengers jarred when an inbound Lincoln avenue street car crashed into the rear of another at Center and Negley avenues last night. The injured man, Saul Levi, of 138 Erin street, was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital.

Windows in both cars were shattered.

5 CHILDREN IN AUTO CRASHES INJURED

2 Huurt as Machines Collide; Woman, 57, Cut as Other Cars Hit in West Liberty

Two girls, passengers in an automobile driven by P. E. Wittmer, of 1306 Carson street, were injured last night when it collided with one driven by Louis Coles, of 17 Watt street, police reported.

The injured were Wittmer's daughter, Betty, 8, and Isabel Curry, 8, of Curry, Pa. They suffered lacerations and bruises and were taken to the Homeopathic Hospital.

Mrs. Ora Jackson, 57, of Washington, Pa., sustained lacerations of the scalp when an automobile in which she was riding was struck by a machine driven, police said, by Abraham Saville, 53, of 907 Highview street, in West Liberty avenue at Brookline Junction, last night. Mrs. Jackson was taken to the South Side Hospital. The woman's husband, John S. Jackson, and Wilbert M. Crouch, of Second street, Washington, driver of the car, escaped injury.

Search for the driver of an automobile said to have been abandoned on the Sixteenth Street Bridge after it crashed into a girder of the span last night, was instituted by police today. Witnesses told police that the driver, injured in the crash, was aided by other motorists.

Mrs. Mary Settio and two small children, Frank and Mary, of 634 Race street, Clairton, were taken to the McKeesport Hospital, and William Gosney, 544 Ninth street, Clairton, and Larry Nocholette, of 634 Ridge avenue, Clairton, bruised slightly when cars driven by the two men collided at Sixth street and Waddell avenue, Clairton, last night.

Lillian Wald, 6, of 711 Linden avenue, East Pittsburgh, sustained lacerations of the head and leg when struck by a car near her home. Edward Guidus, of 1445 Grandview avenue, North Braddock, said by police to have been the driver of the automobile, was not arrested, as witnesses said the child stepped in the path of the machine.

Accused of passing through red lights in Tarentum, 20 motorists were fined $5 each at hearings before Burgess V. L. Henry last night. Ten other motorists are to be given hearings next Monday night.

Navy Will Repair Wilkins Submarine

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(Universal.)—The submarine P-12, to be used by Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins in his underwater trip to the North pole, will be reconditioned by experts at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, it was announced by Acting Secretary of the Navy Jahncke.

Inability of local firms to make necessary repairs, which will cost approximately $10,000, induced the Navy Department to act.

Police Shoot Bird Pests Out of Trees

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 9.—Police here declared armed warfare on thousands of grackles, a species of the blackbird family, which have been roosting in the trees of the North Hill district of the city. After the police fired several volleys more than 100 dead birds were picked up.

Hip Broken in Fall, Aged Woman Dies

A fall suffered in her home a week ago caused the death of Mrs. Mary Sheehan, 70, of 9 Sylvan avenue, in the Mercy Hospital early today. Her hip was fractured in the fall, according to the report to the coroner.

CHOCOLATE IS LIKE OTHERS OF RACE

WHEN KID CHOCOLATE, light featherweight, gave away 10 pounds to Jack (Kid) Berg, lightweight, in their bout at New York last Thursday night, he wasn't offering anything new in the sense of a Negro fighter's being willing to shoulder a big handicap in poundage. Boxing history is dotted with instances of the same kind. Chocolate was only following the example of some famous fistic predecessors belonging to his own race in readily taking on a heavier opponent.

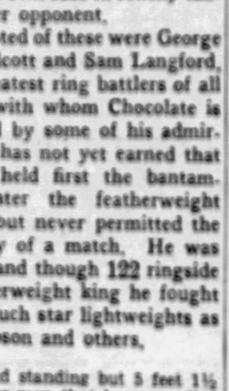
George Dixon.

The most noted of these were George Dixon, Joe Walcott and Sam Langford, three of the greatest ring battlers of all time. Dixon, with whom Chocolate is being compared by some of his admirers, though he has not yet earned that high ranking, held first the bantamweight and later the featherweight championship, but never permitted the matter of pounds to stand in the way of a match. He was willing to fight anybody at any time, and though 122 ringside was easy for him when he was featherweight king he fought battles of 10, 20 and 25 rounds with such star lightweights as Young Griffo, Frank Erne, Spike Robson and others.

WALCOTT, ONLY A welterweight, and standing but 5 feet 1½ inches, fought and defeated so many larger men that he was called the "giant killer." His most notable achievement of that kind was stopping Joe Choynski, light heavyweight, in seven rounds. Among the many middleweights he faced were such men as Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, George Gardner, Kid Carter, Billy Stift, Wild Bill Hanrahan, Jack Bonper and Frank Childs.

Langford never held a title, but he was uncrowned champion if ever there was one, and beyond question was the best middleweight of his day. He was the one man whom Jack Johnson persistently avoided when the latter was heavyweight champion. Many times Langford left his class to knock out heavyweights like Harry Wills, George Godfrey, Jim Barry, Sam McVey, Joe Jeannette, Gunboat Smith, George Cotton, Jim Flynn, Al Kubiak, Porky Flynn, Battling Jim Johnson, Andre Anderson, Big Bill Tate and Jeff Clark. So in scorning to quibble over weight, Chocolate is only carrying on where earlier Queensberry greats of his own color left off.

FRED BRICKELL, former Pirate outfielder, who went to the Phillies the other day in the waiver exchange that brought Denny Southern to the Bucs, made a great start for the Quakers yesterday. In his first game for Burt Shotton, Brickell made a triple and a single in five times at bat scored a run, and possibly saved the game for the Phils by making a sensational running catch of Leo Durocher's drive to the Cincinnati flag pole with two runners on the bases.



Fred Brickell.

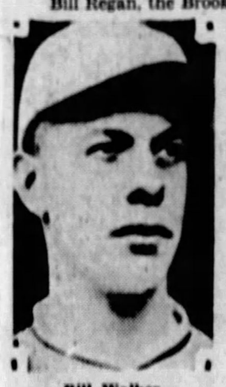
WHILE SOUTHERN DID not start out so flashily for the Rovers yesterday, local fans are still confident that the exchange will benefit the Bucs. The two players themselves are well satisfied with the deal. Southern, getting away from the tail-end Phils, said when he reported here yesterday that he was "glad to be in the big league at last." Brickell also declared before leaving Pittsburgh that he was glad he had been traded, for the reason that with the Phils he will have a chance to play regularly, which he had no prospect of getting here against such opposition as the Waner brothers and Adam Comorosky.*

BECAUSE IT WAS accomplished in a night game, some of the authorities may decline to classify among the real baseball records the feat of Outfielder Gene Rye, of the Waco Texas League club, who made three home runs in one inning during a slugging bee against the Beaumont team, but at least it gives the fans something to talk about.

It is a batting achievement without a parallel in any league in the history of organized baseball. On a number of occasions, in the majors as well as the minors, a player has made two homers in one inning, but not until the practice of playing league games under artificial light was adopted did any batter ever succeed in making three.

THE ONLY PITTSBURGH player ever to hit for the circuit twice in an inning was Jake Stenzel, who did it in the third round of a game in Boston on June 6, 1894. The Pirates, scoring 12 runs, made four homers in that inning, the others being credited to Denny Lyons and Louie Bierbauer. The last-named made two round-trippers in one inning on July 12, 1890, but at that time was playing for Brooklyn in the Players' League.

Bill Regan, the Brookline boy playing second base for the Boston Red Sox was the latest major leaguer to connect for two homers in an inning. He did it on July 16, 1928. The other big leaguers to do it were Charles Jones, Boston Nationals, in 1880; Ed Cartwright, St. Louis A. A., in 1890; Bob Lowe, Boston Nationals, in 1894; Ken Williams, St. Louis Americans, in 1922, and Hack Wilson, New York Nationals, in 1925.



Bill Walker.

THERE APPEARS TO be little chance for the Pirates to start a new drive or to get very far with an old one as long as Bill Walker and Carl Hubbell are hanging around to knock the props from under them. The two Giant left-handers who subjected the Bucs to a tandem trouncing in yesterday's doubleheader at Forbes Field have been poison to the Ensmen all season. This latest dual drubbing makes a total of nine times that Walker and Hubbell have beaten the Bucs this year against only a single failure. Walker has tripped them five times in six games, and Hubbell has taken them for four straight.

ONE GAME HAS been lost to another Giant southpaw, Clarence Mitchell. The only New York right-handers to take the measure of the Picaroons during 1930 were Pete Donohue and Tiny Chaplin, who spilled the locals once each. Yesterday's results gave the McGrawites a total of 12 victories over Pittsburgh up to date, seven out of nine here and five out of eight at the Polo Grounds.

That cinches the season's series for the Giants against the Pirates, who have won only five games in the string so far. The Freebooters have lost more decisions to the New Yorkers than to any other club in the league, and this is the first series of the year that they have definitely lost.

THERE ISN'T MUCH encouragement to be seen for the Senators when they grab another game in the big appalling contract of over-

Schoenrath Wins German Ring Title

HAMBURG, Germany, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Hans Schoenrath won the German heavyweight championship last night by knocking out Dr. Ludwig Hayman in the first round.

The fight lasted only one minute and 30 seconds, the Bavarian boxing academician thereby adding another to his long string of defeats and apparently confirming the general opinion that as a defender of the championship he was harmful to Germany's boxing prestige. Forty thousand spectators tumultuously expressed dissatisfaction over the quick termination of the bout.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Frank Smith's Edgewood champions will battle for dear life this afternoon. Carded to encounter the powerful and well-balanced Mount Lebanon host in contest upon which the fate of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League title for 1930 rests, the mighty Suburbanites will be put to the sternest sort of test to beat off the attack of the outfit that in a single year has risen from the second division of the loop to the runner-up post in the select circle of Section I.

The tilt originally was billed for the Mount Lebanon lot on May 24, but rain that afternoon spoiled the program. Hostilities have now, however, been switched to Stanton Heights, where both quality and number of courts are better adapted to titular play than are Lebanon facilities.

HARBISON ABSENT

Edgewood will go into battle this afternoon minus the scintillant Sam Harbison, Princeton ace and West Penn semi-finalist. This means that McCook Reed and Capt. Smith will advance a notch apiece to numbers two and three, respectively, while Paul Hicks retains his position at the head of the list. Andy Smeaton, undefeated Duke star, will cavort at number four, with Charley Woods, Chuck Boyd and Chick Cochran available for the remaining pair of assignments. Mount Lebanon will counter with the giant Knoche, Russ Unger, W. J. Blakeley, Edgar Alcorn, Capt. Neal Rumsey and either Hartman or Artzberger.

A 7-2 victory for the Mount aggregation would throw the race into a tie with each of the pace-setting squads boasting 44 wins to 18 losses. The championship would then be contingent upon the outcome of an Edgewood-Westinghouse doubles match that has still to be played and a Mt. Lebanon-South Hills dual affair that has also to be cared for. Should these jousts likewise fail to settle the destiny of the title, an official play-off would be necessary.

DECISIVE WIN REMOTE

But likelihood of so overwhelming a Mt. Lebanon triumph is remote. Edgewood has not suffered defeat in league competition since 1928, and the Smithmen have no intention of permitting this flawless record to be blemished, if determined effort counts for aught. The actual fact of the matter is that Edgewood reigns favorite to cop the impending fracas and may even do so by a margin sufficiently decisive to allow Dave O'Loughlin's P. A. A. performers a fighting chance to push ahead into second place, if the Winged Head crew can hang a sufficiently crushing setback upon the University Club when the two Schenley Farms combines reel off their EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: IT IS POSSIBLE FOR A PERSON TO LIVE IN THREE CENTURIES AND NOT BE 100 YEARS OLD—A man born on December 31, 1800, and who on December 31, 1900, would be crossing the International Date Line in a western direction on board a ship, can celebrate his third century and yet not be a full 100 years old. December 31, 1800, was the Eighteenth Century, December 31, 1900, was the Nineteenth Century, and January 1, 1901, was in the Twentieth Century. But a man born December 31, 1800, and died January 1, 1901, during the early hours would be almost one day short of being 100 years old. Traveling westward across the International Date Line you gain a day. Contrary to popular opinion the Eighteenth Century did not end on December 31, 1799, but on December 31, 1800, and the same calculation applies to every century of our era. A BOAT MOVES FASTER WHEN THE OARS ARE OUT OF THE WATER —A rowboat or shell is at its greatest speed when the blades of the oars slip out of the water. It is then that what is known in rowing as the "recovery" begins. This is verified by anyone familiar with the science of rowing.

BOB WINGATE MUNY CHOICE

JACKSONVILLE Fla., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Robert E. Wingate, of Jacksonville, and Joseph S. Greene, of Philadelphia, went into the finals of the National Public Links championship here yesterday by winning two matches each. Today one of them will be crowned municipal links champion to succeed Carl Kauffmann, of Pittsburgh, who held the championship three years.

Wingate eliminated B. H. Burrows, Washington entry and Larry O'Palka, of Detroit, 5 and 4 each. O'Palka reached the semi-finals by winning from Walter Barton, of Akron, 6 and 5.

WINGATE FAVORITE

Greene coasted into the semi-finals by eliminating the last of the west coast players, Barney Lucas, Los Angeles, 4 and 3 in the morning match, and became the finalist with Wingate when he surprisingly upset Dominick Strafaci, Brooklyn sharpshooter, 2 and 1.

Wingate, 33-year-old veteran, ruled the favorite for the 36-hole finals today. Three years ago Wingate got to the finals and was defeated by Kauffmann, who was disqualified in the current renewal of the play because of what was termed by U. S. G. A. officials as an inadvertent scoring error, in the first qualifying round.

Greene, 24 years old, now is closer than he has ever been to a public links title.

O'PALKA DEFEATED

O'Palka was the match play sensation until Wingate eliminated him. He defeated the tournament medalist, Al Quigley, of Chicago, in easy style in the first round, and again demonstrated marked ability in match play. He weakened, however, in his play

Game starts at 3 o'clock.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

As the Pirates endeavored this morning to reassemble their retreating squad, they wondered whether they hadn't tried to cover too much ground. Winning seven out of eight from three clubs like the Giants, Cardinals and Cubs may have made our boys just a bit chesty. Anyhow, their pride rode ahead of a big fall, and the Oaklanders, with four salty defeats in their systems since returning from Chicago, were just another ball club as they made ready to take on the ambitious Giants this afternoon.

The Men of McGraw toppled the faltering Freebooters twice yesterday before something like 16,000 home fans. The rooters apparently were hopeful that the Buccos would give the Polo Grounders another double-edged setback, but if they were in this mood, they reckoned without due consideration for 25 clever athletes who think they have a good chance to cop the flag.

FRENCH TO HURL

The Giants fought with furious mein as they subdued the Oaklanders, 9 to 1, in the first game and they carried on in the same relentless manner in winning the second struggle, 7 to 2.

Larry French will pitch out of turn to face the Giants this afternoon. The southpaw had had only two days of rest, but Manager Ens is in another quandary for sharpshooters and the lefthander is ever ready to take the slab slip. McGraw has several pitchers ready, including Pete Donohue, Fred Fitzsimmons and Clarence Mitchell.

The Pirates' pitching staff has spells when it runs along like that of the Phillies but the supporting cast went with it in both games of yesterday's dual bill. Heinie Meine was fine for three rounds of the opener—and then the loose play started. Meine, in one time, went right along with the perforated defense. Leon Chagnon finishing the game.

Ervin Brame was a clever pitcher through a part of the closing struggle, but the enemy got the home-run range in the last round and Erv was bested, his buddies being just about as helpless in

EAST TAKES LEAD IN INTERSECTIONAL DUEL

BRUINS SCORE LONE VICTORY FOR WEST

Associated Press.

Another East-West warfare is on in full blast in the major leagues and if the opening day's results are any criterion then the Eastern clubs are due to see their percentage column rise several notches.

Ten games were played in the inter-sectional combat yesterday with the western teams able to salvage only one of the conflicts. The Chicago Cubs kept their section of the country from being completely whitewashed by defeating the Boston Braves, 6 to 1. Home runs by Clarence Blair and Charley Grimm coupled with effective pitching by Guy Bush gave the champions the game. Boston's single run was the result of Walter Berger's twenty-eighth home run.

ROBINS VICTORS

It was well that the Cubs did win or they would have found themselves trailing the Robins by still greater margin than three and one-half games. With Babe Herman smacking the ball for two home runs, a double and a single in four times at bat, and Glenn Wright and Jake Flowers adding a pair of circuit drives, the league leaders easily downed the St. Louis Cardinals, 11 to 5. While the Robins were winning Ray Phelps chalked up his twelfth triumph of the season.

The Giants gained a half-game on the Cubs and Robins when they were called on to play the Pirates twice and won both, the first 9 to 1 and the second 7 to 2. Bill Walker kept the Pirates' 11 hits scattered in the opener, while Carl Hubbell let the Corsairs down with five blows in the nightcap. Lloyd Waner, experiencing his best day at bat since returning to the game, got four hits in five times at bat in the first encounter, but did not play in the second. Home runs by Roettger, Hogan and Comorosky played an important role in the scoring in the second fracas.

BRICKELL STARS

Freddie Brickell, a recent acquisition from the Pirates, played a leading part in the Phillies' 8-to-5 triumps over the Reds. The former Pirate singled and tripled in five times at bat and made a brilliant long running catch of Durocher's drive.

The Athletics found little trouble at Chicago, whipping the White Sox 5 to 1 and 4 to 1 in a double-header and thereby increasing their lead in the American League another half game. Bob Grove hung up his eighteenth victory of the season in the opener as Al Simmons and Jimmy Dykes drove out home runs. Shores bested Ted Lyons in the last game, letting the Hose down with three hits.

Keeping pace with the champions, the Washington Senators came from behind to defeat the Cleveland Indians, 5 to 4. After spotting the Indians four runs in the first four frames, the Senators kept nicking at Shoffner and Jablonowski until they took the lead in the eighth on Manush's double and Cronin's fourth hit.

YANKS DOWN BROWNS

George Pipgras and Harry Rice put together some effective hurling and batting, respectively, to give the Yankees a 5 to 3 decision over the Browns. Pipgras held the Browns hitless for five innings and then gave only five while Rice accounted for three runs with a single, home run and base on balls.

The Red Sox, aided by a six-run rally in the first inning, defeated Detroit 8 to 6 to break the Tigers' six-game winning streak. In winning the Sox were forced to put down a four-run rally by the Tigers in the eighth.

Tilden Heads Draw For Men's Tourney

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Big Bill Tilden heads the draw for the men's Eastern grass court championships, starting today on the courts of the Westchester Country Club at Rye.

Fight Results

At San Francisco—Gorilla Jones and Manuel Quintero drew, 10 rounds.

Nick Altrock Says:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Old Hack Wilson hasn't got any sunshine in his eyes this season. The way he is whacking out homers you would think he was running for Sultan of Swat and was expecting to have a harem thrown in. Hack has certainly got the build for slamming the old apple. If he had one more leg he would look like a grand piano, and, at that, I will bet his neck is as big as Gus Sonnenburg's thigh. Well, folks, if you are a sucker for statistics, you will love to know that a Boston team never lost a World Series. And the Hub certainly won't have a chance to lose a World Series this year, either.

this contest as they were in the first.

A couple of clever lefthanders took the Pirates for their long buggy ride. Bill Walker turned the trick in the first game and Cal Hubbell duplicated in the last fight.

Outfielder Denny Southern, who came to the Pirates from the Phillies in the Fred Brickell exchange, made his debut when he batted in a pinch in the first game. Denny then supplanted Lloyd Waner in the second game. His only hit drove in a run with two out to tie up the second game in the second inning.

The first game was a fine slab duel between Walker and Meine for three rounds, neither side scoring in this period, although the Pirates passed up a couple of chances.

The Pirates proceeded to blow the works in the fourth. Lindstrom nicked Meine for a single, and Heinle then walked Terry under dispute with a 3-to-2 count. Traynor helped to further the jam when he failed to make a play on Ott's bunt, the error filling the bases.

Hogan hit a hot liner to Suhr, who failed to make a one-hand catch of the drive. The smash went for a hit, scoring Lindstrom, and then Suhr made an unnecessary throw to the plate, his shot going high over Al Bool's head into the dugout as two more Giants went over. Jackson followed with a triple to score the fourth run of the inning.

FUMBLE COSTLY

The Giants added two more in the sixth, Bartell's fumble helping the enemy cause. Two hits, a walk and a wild pitch were a part of the round. Lindstrom's three-bagger and Terry's sacrifice fly gave the Giants another in the seventh.

The Buccos made their only run in the home half of the seventh on Bool's single, another by L. Waner and Brother Paul's double to left.

A walk and three infield hits gave the Giants a run in the eighth, and they picked up another tally in the ninth on two singles and a sacrifice fly.

Adam Comorosky slammed a homer over the leftfield wall in the first inning of the second fight, but none was on at the time and the Buccos were in arrears, the Giants having scored twice on a walk to Leach, a triple by Lindstrom and a single by Terry.

BUCS TIE SCORE

The Pirates worked up to a tie in the second. Bartell started with a walk, but his next two pals went out and left him at second. Brame clouted a single to right, Dick going to third and Southern tallied him with a single to center.

Triples by Leach and Terry added one for the Giants in the fifth, and Roettger gave them a safety tally in the sixth, when he drove a homer over the leftfield wall. Shorty Hogan duplicated this drive in the eighth, the bases being empty this time, also.

Bill Terry drove in two tallies in the ninth, a single by Critz and Traynor's fumble of Leach's grounder helping to set the stage. Hubbell pitched runless ball from the second to the finish during which time he yielded only two hits.

Chuck Collins Wins Junior Golf Title

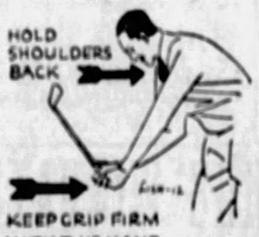
ALLISON FACES WOOD TODAY

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Heading for his second big tournament victory in a week, Sydney B. Wood, Jr., of New York, was confronted by a formidable obstacle in the person of Wilmer Allison, Davis cup player from Fort Worth, Tex., in the final round of the annual Southampton invitation tennis tournament today.

Wood, who conquered Ellsworth Vines, Jr., of Pasadena, to win the Seabright bowl last week, scored in spectacular fashion over Frank Shields, of New York, yesterday in the semi-final round while Allison was upsetting Frank Hunter, of New Rochelle, in a ding dong battle.

Wood dropped the first two sets to Shields, who had eliminated big Bill Tilden on Thursday, but steadied to take the next three in a row and the match, 1-6, 1-6, 10-8, 7-5, 6-4. Allison, after winning the first set, dropped the next two and then came back to win the fourth and fifth and the match. The scores were 6-4, 9-11, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2.

GOLF
As Champions Play It



How do you prevent pulling shots?

Answered by MIKE BRADY.

MOTHER VICTOR

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—The younger generation received setback here yesterday when Miss Theron E. Palmer defeated her daughter, Miss Mary Palmer, 4 up and 2 to play in the final game of the women's city golf championship at the Lake Shore Golf Club. It was the third title for Mrs. Palmer, she having won in 1928 and 1929.

THE LOWDOWN ON THE BUCS

By THE BENCHWARMER.

Well, folks, you just can't figure out this grand old American pastime. McGraw gives Bill Walker and Carl Hubbell advance tickets and tells them to get a good sleep and be ready for the Pirates. Well, I guess the two lefties were in the hay about 10 bells, and they come out there an' make us look sick.

That seemed like a good argument for sending pitchers ahead, but when it was mentioned somebody said McGraw did the same thing a year ago and the Buccos plastered the advance guard so hard you would think they was ridin' a day coach all night.

I don't suppose Shanty Hogan and Al Bool attended any round dances last night after catchin' a double-header in such hot weather, but I wouldn't be a bit surprised if they did. On our team we all know that a double-header jes' gets Farmer Al in real trim, and I don't think Hogan is very delicate.

That fourth-place money seems to be gettin' further away, and only four days ago we wuz all figurin' how we would spend it.

Well, the milk ain't all spilt yet, and they tell you not to be crossin' bridges before you come to them. I know one thing, though, and it's not an alibi. We've had a lot of tough teams to play in the last two weeks, and we'll still be playin' them until the Giants leave town. Maybe we can fatten up when the Phillies come.

The whole gang was glad to see where Fred Brickell broke in with a bang for the Phils. Looks like both clubs ought to cash in on that deal. Brick didn't have much chance to play center regularly here, and we think he'll land that job for Shotton.

PLATT GAINS CANUCK FINAL

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—J. Wood Platt, of Philadelphia, and C. Ross Somerville, of London, meet in the 36-hole final round of the Canadian amateur golf championship today.

Platt gained the championship round by eliminating Carroll M. Stuart, of Montreal, after a hard and bitter struggle, 4 and 3. Somerville trounced J. Raymond Ferguson, of Philadelphia, 10 and 9.

An air of strained relations characterized the Platt-Stuart match. It all happened as a result of the Canadian player's tendency to take his time with every shot. Stuart is noted as a cautious and slow player. Matters did not improve when Platt at the thirty-first hole complained that his opponent, contrary to the rules, had removed some twigs near the lie of his ball. A. Collyer, of Montreal, president of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, upheld Platt's protest and Stuart forfeited the hole to go three down.

Garden Radio Ban To be Permanent

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Madison Square Garden indicated a definite policy of non-broadcasting important boxing matches in announcing official gross receipts of $181,178.38 for the Chocolate-Berg fight at the Polo Grounds. The match was not broadcast and the gate was nearly $20,000 in excess of that for the Singer-Mandell lightweight title bout, which was put on the air.

The net receipts were $182,377.18 and the paying spectators numbered 34,922, exceeding ringside estimates substantially.

The reports of Referee Patsy Haley and the two judges, Joe Agnello and Charles Mathison, who gave Berg a 2-1 verdict, revealed wide difference of opinion.

Freeman Defeats Lee in Erie

GIRL NET ACES GAIN FINALS

EASTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Marjorie Morrill, of Dedham, Mass., and Mary Greef, of Kansas City, swept into the final round of singles in the Maidstone Club's annual gold cup tennis tournament yesterday and will meet for the championship today.

Miss Greef, ranked sixth in the national list, brushed aside Dorothy Weisel, of Sacramento, in easy fashion, 6-0, 6-2, but Miss Morrill, ranked 11th, had to overcome a hard-fighting foe in the person of Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., No. 4 ranking player to reach the finals. Miss Morrill won by scores of 6-4, 9-7.

The spark and dash which had given Miss Weisel two surprising victories over Edith Cross, of San Francisco, and Midge Gladman, of Santa Monica, were not on display against Miss Greef. The Californian could offer no defense for Miss Greef's fierce attack.

Miss Gladman and Josephine Cruickshank, of Santa Ana, reached the finals of doubles by defeating Caroline Babcock, of Los Angeles and Dorothy Workum, of San Mariana, 6-3, 7-5. They will meet in the finals today either Miss Morrill and Penelope Anderson, Richmond, Va., or Miss Cross and Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper, of San Francisco.

Miss Morrill and Miss Anderson reached the semi-finals by whipping Mrs. J. Dallas Corberie, of Southboro, Mass., and Anne Page, of Philadelphia, 6-1, 6-1.

Moe and Joe's Best Bet yesterday, JUDGE SCHILLING, in the third race, ran third. Their Long Shot Special, CHICSU, in the sixth, also was third.

taking the Athletics only to learn that on the same afternoon the Mackmen were winning two, as was the case yesterday.

Washington's pennant cause is becoming more hopeless with each succeeding day. If the A's only break even in their remaining 42 games, the Senators will be required to win 32 of their remaining 46 contests, or such abnormal stepping as .696 to beat them out.

Bill Terry.

IF BILL TERRY had not come back with a big rush in the second game here yesterday after being held hitless in the first encounter, he would have been ousted from the leadership in the race for the National League batting championship. For meanwhile Babe Herman, of the Robins, was having a field day in St. Louis, with four hits in four times at bat, which boosted his average of .404. However, Terry broke loose for three singles and a triple in five times up during the second half of the Forbes Field bargain. That gave him a .500 mark of four out of eight for the day and kept him in first place with an average elevated to .409. Terry continues to stand out as the most important cog in the Giant machine and just about the most valuable player in the National League.

Favorites came through in the majority of last evening's sandlot baseball tussles. None of the league pace setters were defeated, Homewood and Dormont in the City loop, Reliance Life in the C. and I. circuit and St. Phillips in the Crafton - Ingram Church League scoring victories or gaining ties.

In the City League, Homewood and Pleasant Valley battled to a 2-all tie. This game was one of the few that did not go the way it was expected. The Smilers played headup ball, and gave Bell's sluggers a merry battle all the way. Dormont walloped W. O. W., 10 to 2, in the other league contest.

DRAVO FAILS

In the Commercial and Industrial League, Dravo's attempt to stop Reliance Life failed, the Lifers winning a shutout game by a score of 6 to 0. In a second league contest, Reick McJunkins defeated Carnegie Steel, 5 to 1.

St. Phillips punched out an 8-to-3 triumph over the Methodists in the Crafton - Ingram Church League. In the Philadelphia Company loop, Byllesby blanked Equitable Gas, 2 to 0.

The Homestead Aces defeated North Bessemer, 4 to 0, in one Greater Pittsburgh League game, while in a second, the Dan Heeps shook things up a bit by defeating Edgewood, 12 to 8.

CRAWFORDS WIN

Portvue defeated Grandview, 9-4; Pitcairn defeated Irwin, 3-2; Lincoln Civics downed the Swissvale Firemen, 6-3, and Coraopolis defeated the Maplewood club, 1-0, in other independent tussles.

Brooklyn's team won the Harding trophy by the widest margin it has ever been taken. The boys with an average age of 20 years, had a team score of 617, or 16 strokes better than Louisville.

Should Wingate win his match today he will bring the James D. Standish, Jr., trophy to the South for the first time since it was offered nine years ago.

JONES, QUINTERO DRAW

NEW COACHES

Several weeks ago, two institutions appointed new head football coaches. Dutch Bergman, of Notre Dame, goes to Catholic University of Washington, D. C., to succeed McAuliffe, of Dartmouth. Frank Thomas, of Notre Dame, goes to Alabama next January to succeed Wallace Wade, who in turn goes to Duke University.

Knute Rockne.

Bergman will be remembered as one of the flashiest halfbacks in Notre Dame football history. In the fall of 1915, he made a long run for a touchdown against every opponent on the Notre Dame schedule. After the war Bergman played one more year, but was injured in mid-season. Since then he has coached at New Mexico Aggies, University of Dayton and the University of Minnesota.

Frank Thomas never carried the ball while quarterback at Notre Dame. He could not pass and could not kick and yet he goes down in history as one of the smartest field generals the Irish ever had. His choice of plays was flawless and he could block. Thomas has coached at the University of Chattanooga and the University of Georgia since leaving Notre Dame in the spring of 1923.

Both of these men have had more than their share of success in coaching and there is every reason to believe that their success will continue in their new positions.

TRACK STARS VIE HERE

INDUSTRIAL CARNIVALS ON PROGRAM

The Philadelphia Company and affiliated corporations were staging their fifth annual carnival in Schenley Oval and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company was holding its forty-fourth annual outing at Kennywood Park.

In each instance elaborate programs had been arranged, and large crowds were in attendance as the contesting at both places got under way.

MARATHON CARDED

Beginning with a modified marathon run of nine miles from the Philadelphia Company Building to Schenley Oval, the Philadelphia Company meet had a diversified program which included a complete slate of events for employes as well as 12 open events for registered amateur athletes.

Following the marathon run, beginning at 12:30, which pursued its course from Sixth avenue and William Penn way to Smithfield street, to Liberty avenue, Center avenue to Penn, to Fifth avenue, to Point Breeze, back in Fifth avenue to Bigelow boulevard and over Panther Hollow Bridge to the oval, a big parade preceded the start of track and field competition, with a big blimp from the Goodyear plant in Akron sailing with the breezes overhead.

The Pittsburgh Railway Company Band furnished the music as the amateur registered athletes, departmental first aid teams, and utilities divisions, including Equitable Gas, Pittsburgh Railways, Byllesby, Engineering and Management, Philadelphia Company and Duquesne Light, paraded.

HORSESHOE PITCHING

Arrangements were made for free transportation of spectators to and from the entrance to Schenley Park before and after the meet, while 3,000 extra seats have been provided to help take care of the big crowd.

Among the amateur athletic organizations represented in the open events at the oval are the following: Pittsburgh Athletic Association, Grove City College, Twenty-Seventh Ward, A. C., Union Athletic Club, P. R. R. A. C., Duquesne Steel A. A., St. Mary's Lyceum, of Sharpsburg; Pittsburgh Silent Club, Rankin High, Golden Indian Club, and Stowe High School. W. S. Haddock, of the A. M. A. A. A. U. is directing the meet.

CROWD AT KENNYWOOD

Kennywood Park was crowded to the hilt as Kathryn Lacey, directed events for women and girls, and N. A. Schafer kept things moving in the men's competition as the Westinghouse carnival opened.

The program for women included a departmental relay, 75-yard dash, 60-yard dash, 50-yard dash, honeymoon express, basketball throw, baseball throw, kiddie kar race, scooter race and a novelty race for wives of employes. The men's events include a 50-yard dash for those who have been with Westinghouse for 20 years or more. Broad jump, pole vault and shot put, field events, and dash races also were carded. Among the open events is a departmental tug of war, in which participants are not permitted to wear spiked shoes. The open track events were staged under the auspices of the A. A. U.

Members of the West View Horse Shoe Club are requested to report at Hawthorne avenue at 7:15 p. m., next Tuesday for a special match. Teams desiring matches call Wellington 1509-M any evening between 6 and 7 o'clock.

Sport Vignettes

Karl E. Davis, former graduate athletic manager at the University of Pittsburgh, now the guiding genius of athletics at Western Reserve University in Cleveland, has been named a member of the advisory committee of 10 which will direct the operations of the new Municipal Stadium now being built in Cleveland and which will be ready for occupancy within a year . . . The stadium will be doubledecked and will have a seating capacity of 75,000 and will be used as the home grounds of the Cleveland Indians and for football games and other features . . . It will be located on the lake front in Downtown Cleveland, near the Public Auditorium . . . It's quite an honor for Davis, virtually a newcomer in the town, to be named to such an important post so soon . . . The records show that Babe Ruth has hit 516 home runs since 1915, of which 241, or almost half, have been clouted in New York . . . He has hit fewer in Washington than in any other city, 25, and more in Detroit, 48, than in any other city outside New York, with 47 in Philadelphia 46 in Boston, 43 in St. Louis, 34 in Chicago and 32 in Cleveland . . . Can it be that Kid Chocolate was suffering from writer's cramp in his bout with Jack (Kid) Berg which produced the Keed's first defeat? 'Tis said both of the Kids wrote daily missives to their intended brides during their training sieges . . . Granting that perhaps Chocolate did deserve the decision, as alleged by as many as are alleging that Berg was the rightful winner of this whirlwind shindy, how does Chocolate shape up with the great featherweights of the past who had to concede weight? . . . Take the case of Johnny Dundee, for instance. There was a remarkable ringman who could make 126 pounds and yet was fighting the Benny Leonards, Charley Whites, Richie Mitchells, Joe Wellings, Willie Jacksons, Freddie Welshes and Leach Crosses, all corking lightweights . . . Dick Curley, of Chicago, manager of Mike Dundee, who boxed Jackie Rodgers at Hickey Park the other night, is one of the best known and best liked of the veteran fight managers and he always is welcomed here . . . Pin a medal on Johnny McGarvey for one of the ace cracks of the local boxing season. Seeing Sammy Paris, short of height and reach, mixing with Terry Waner a tall, rangy kid, at Millvale, he piped: "Well, I see Sammy has dug himself up another tall guy to fight" . . . And it's a fact. One of these nights, Sammy may find himself in there with somebody his own size and have a chance to do himself justice.—HARRY KECK.

early-season postponement later this month.

While Edgewood and Mt. Lebanon hold the stage exclusively in Section I, the lower half of the circuit will be winding up regular schedule of festivities for the campaign. In this sector, too, the leading contenders for the crown will join combat, Sam Keller's Duquesne Librarians being slated to invade Westinghouse for what promises to be a bitter skirmish with Stephen Hayes and his Electrical Seconds. Duquesne will hurl a strong force against the hitherto unthreatened Westinghouse rampart and with better than merely fair prospect of success.

TOUGH FRAYS CARDED

In other Section II tussles, Canonsburg faces tough opposition at College avenue, while Minnetonka does likewise at Washington Heights. West Penn Power rounds out the day's work by visiting Edgewood II for a fray that is just about any one's as far as the advance dope goes.

At a meeting of P. T. A. officers Thursday, it was formally decided to erase the defunct Philadelphia Company team completely from the Section II records. This means that the top-notch Westinghouse Seconds lose nine markers, representing their whitewash verdict over the Utility troop from their victory column, but even so only a miracle can prevent their annexation of the gonfalon, for Duquesne Library is too far behind to do more than gesticulate impotently.

BIG CHANGE HERE FOR DUNDEE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

When Joe Dundee, of Baltimore, comes here tomorrow in advance of his battle with Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, Monday night, it will be a far different arrival than the last and only other time he came to Pittsburgh. That was last year, when he was the welterweight champion of the world, matched to box Jackie Fields in a 15-round bout in Detroit for a purse of $60,000.

Dundee came here amid a fanfare of trumpets to take on Billy Alger, of Phoenix, Ariz., in what frankly was advertised as a tune-up bout for the Fields match. He looked so good in battering Alger around until the referee stopped the slaughter that many of the local fans made the trip to Detroit to see him box Fields and were shocked when Fields dropped him early and won on a foul in two rounds.

Since losing his title, Dundee has not been much in the limelight, but he has had a few hard battles and has won his share of them. In a recent start, he got up off the floor after being dropped by Harry Mason, of England, in the first round in Madison Square Garden, New York, and punched his way to victory. He is fighting now as a junior-middleweight, and will meet McTiernan at 154 pounds.

McTiernan will wind up his training for the battle with a boxing session in the gymnasium of the Homewood Progressive Club today.

WEST MAY BOX HARRIS

Indian Tiger Joe West, the slashing middleweight, of Donora, has been promised a main bout at Hickey Park, Millvale, with Harry Harris, of Bellaire, O., if he succeeds in decisively defeating Lynn Jordan in their 10-round event in the same ring next Thursday night, topping a card of five battles totaling 40 rounds of fighting. Johnny Urban and Harry Williams are in another 10-rounder. Al Becker will be a principal in an eight-rounder, and Ross Fields will meet Anastasio Vaquerio and Jackie Wilson mix with Mose Butch in the six-rounders.

GUYS CAPTURE NIGHT DEBUT

Night baseball formally was introduced to Charleroi fans last night as the Guys walloped the Clarksburg Generals, 10 to 1, in a Mid-Atlantic League game. A crowd estimated at 3,300 witnessed the contest. Stickling, Guy first sacker, walloped three home runs.

At Wheeling, the Stogies rallied to defeat the Jeannette Jays, 8 to 7, and gain a 50-50 standing in the league.

Scottdale overcame an early Cumberland lead of sizeable proportion and defeated the Colts at Scottdale, 12 to 10.

Manager Walsh, of the league leading Fairmont Black Diamonds, punched a single to center in the ninth inning with the bases filled and gave his team a 5-to-4 victory over Johnstown. The Johnnies tallied all their runs in the second frame.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor.

"I like Saturday night on the radio because there is always good band music," writes Miss Ruth Shuster, of Homestead.

We guess there are plenty of fans who look forward to this evening of martial pleasure.

Tonight is no exception, with four of the best bands we know scheduled to entertain. T. J. Vastine and his Westinghouse Band will inaugurate the parade at 6 o'clock over KDKA.

Tampa

At 8 p. m. WCAE will have the Pop Concert from New York, at 8:30 KDKA will present the Goldman Band, and at 9:30 Arthur Pryor's outfit will be on WCAE.

Tampa the Magician, who appears daily at WCAE, giving the radio audience the benefit of his magic, entertained newspapermen at a dinner in the Press Club last night. Tampa has an attic full of parlor tricks, but refuses to divulge any of the inner secrets of optical illusion which he uses when on the road for Thurston. We present his picture today for the first time.

CITY DEMANDS FEES FOR DOGS

City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley said today that every Pittsburgher who owns a dog and is delinquent in paying his tag tax must do so at once or face prosecution.

Deploring the number of persons who still owe for 1930 dog tags, Schooley said yesterday that checkups were being made and that all those who had refused to pay were to be prosecuted by police or constables before aldermen.

He said:

"We have had a number of complaints from dog owners who contend they are treated unfairly. They say they have paid licenses and then receive a summons from an alderman to appear for a hearing on a charge of violating the dog license ordinance. The truth of the matter is that after they were notified of pending prosecution they hurried to the city treasurer's office and purchased tags. No one had a chance to drop the charges."

Since February 1, according to Schooley's figures, his office has licensed 11,985 male dogs, 2,810 females and 1,007 kennels.

'Falling Star'

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Irma Gladden, famous film star, is found murdered in her own car, which is parked on the grounds of her Beverly Hills home. The star's boudoir is completely ransacked. Robin Dale learns that Irma Gladden recently divorced for a third time, left a party the evening of the murder with a former husband, Mindino, Filipino houseboy, discharged by the star for theft, is about to be arrested for the crime. Dale convinces the police of Mindino's innocence. A search proves that robbery was not the motive. Questioning Mathilda, the maid, the police learn of the frequent visits of various men since the star's latest divorce. Warren Sibley, her director, and reported to be her next matrimonial prospect, is questioned. Mrs. Sibley is also questioned. Neither has an alibi. The police are unable to locate Leighton, the recently-divorced husband, or Robert Worth, Irma Gladden's first husband. Worth is known to have threatened her life. A private screening of "Falling Star," Miss Gladden's last motion picture, gives Robin Dale the needed clue to the identity of the slayer.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER VI

It was close to midnight when they assembled at Henry's on the boulevard, as is the custom after previews.

Robin Dale looked about the table at the strange gathering . . . Joseph Gold, Warren Sibley, Grace Sibley, Rex Forsythe, Andre Leighton . . . a strangely silent group gathered to dine together after seeing the life-like image and hearing the voice of one now gone who was so deeply entangled with their lives.

The tragedy on the screen, so closely parallel to the real life tragedy, had placed its grim touch upon them. Irma Gladden's soft voice as she enchanted her victims, and then the pitiful pleading in it when she realized she was facing a grim avenger at the end still rang in Robin Dale's ears. He almost pictured the scene as it happened in the coupe under the porte-cochere . . . first her soft tones and then the pleading with the unknown for a life that only meant pleasure because it had not the ability to accept sorrow.

Some of those at the table strove at times to turn the conversation into light channels—succeeded for a time—and then again silence would settle over them. In the midst of one of these silent periods, Joe, the friend of all Hollywood, came to the table.

"I knew you came in, Dale; you're wanted on the telephone."

Perplexed at such an unexpected call, Dale went to the telephone. He was startled to hear Capt. Sommers' voice.

"Been trying all over to get hold of you, Dale. There's due to be a break in the Gladden case. Robert Worth called up this evening and said he'd meet us at the Gladden house and tell us who killed Irma Gladden. He was on the grounds the night of the murder and saw the man who did it!"

"Why has he been hiding out?"

"Said he was afraid he'd be accused of it on account of being around the place. He's kept under cover because he's frightened of his own life, as he thinks the murderer may have seen him."

"What time do you meet Worth?"

"One o'clock . . . thought you'd want to be there . . . pick you up about quarter to at the Beverely-Wilshire."

"Better make it 12:30, Captain . . . and you're liable to catch the murderer at the same time."

"What makes you say that?"

"I think I know who the guilty one is . . . I believe Worth will confirm it . . . see you at 12:30."

Robin Dale went back to the table. He did not sit down. He wanted to watch the effect of his words on those at the table. He spoke slowly and in a low tone of voice.

"I think we will learn the identity of Miss Gladden's murderer tonight, my friends. Robert Worth has telephoned the police that he saw the man the night the crime was committed. He is going to meet the police at the Gladden home and tell them. I've promised to meet Capt. Sommers . . . I know you're all interested . . . the police will be able to tell you late tonight."

Robin Dale went out and drove to the rendezvous at the Gladden dwelling in company with Capt. Sommers, District Attorney Kenton and two detectives. The grounds appeared deserted. The unlighted house stood like a ghost against the background of the dark hills. They entered through the gate and approached the porte-cochere. A black, misshapen mass lay huddled on the ground. Capt. Sommers sprang toward it.

It was the body of Robert Worth . . . dead! A dark blotch discolored the pavement of the drive . . . a knife had been driven through his heart, but the weapon was gone!

"Damn me for a fool!" muttered Robin Dale as he stood beside the still-warm body of the unfortunate Worth. "But I couldn't have foreseen this! Only a fiend could have done this!"

"Don't blame yourself, Dale . . . you can't be sure even now who's responsible."

"That was it . . . there were so many threads I didn't dare make a mistake . . ."

"If you know, we'd better do something tonight."

"We will! I must go to the house to pick up the bit of evidence I want. Will you, captain, go over to South Roxbury—Andre Leighton's place—and bring Leighton back? I'll wait at the house. We must clear two little points and then you can make your arrest."

Robin Dale hurried to the Forsythe house. He went to his room, unlocked a compartment of his trunk and took out the copy of "Falling Star" script. Downstairs again he found Rex Forsythe in the library. The author poured two drinks.

"What did Worth have to say?" the author was asked.

"Nothing! He was murdered on the same spot as Irma Gladden."

"Then they still don't know who killed Irma?"

"No, but they'll learn tonight. I know who did it. . . . I'd like to have your opinion of my solution of the crime, Forsythe. The police are bringing Leighton, but we'll have five or 10 minutes."

"Sure, Dale, let's hear it." The two men sat down and Robin Dale prepared to unfold the result of his deductions.

(Who did Robin Dale believe was guilty of the crime? What bit of evidence did he come to the house to get? Why did he want Leighton? What gave Robin Dale the final clue to the mystery? Why did the police fail to find the murder weapons? Read the solution next Saturday in the Sun-Telegraph.)

SOLUTION TO

The Hemp Rope

By ARTHUR HOERL

At 3 the following afternoon they were assembled in a large room on one of the upper floors at headquarters. In the gathering were Capt. Blake, Sergt. Jardin, Robin Dale and the suspects in the case, Richard Darrell, Andrew Eastly, Mrs. Mary Lochel and Ralph Barnes. At Dale's suggestion Charlotte Hubbard was omitted from the proceedings.

A beam had been placed in position across the room, at a height of about 12 feet. On a small stand were the props for the play: hemp rope, hammer, hook and, standing under the beam, a chair.

"I am going to ask you," explained Capt. Blake, "one by one, to stand on that chair and hammer the hook into the beam and thereafter fasten the rope to the hook. The rope, by the way, is the one by which Jonathan Hubbard was hanged. The hook is to be driven directly above the small card tacked at the center of the beam, Mr. Eastly, you are first."

Eastly rose without hesitation, his calm unruffled, proceeded to take hook and hammer and step on the chair. As he looked up at the beam he paused a moment and then, without further hesitation, hammered the hook home. He quickly attached the rope and went back to his seat. An attendant undid all this work and they were ready for the second act.

"Mr. Barnes . . . you're next."

Barnes, with the same matter-of-factness which had characterized Eastly's actions, lifted the hammer and hook from the stand and mounted the chair. As he gazed upward he became rigid, for he, too, read what Eastly had read on the little card: We know where the rope was purchased. The storekeeper is outside ready to make an identification. The hammer dropped from Barnes' hand and clattered to the floor. Dale was on his feet and picked it up, handing it back. Barnes, visibly nervous, took it with his left hand and hastily started to drive the hook into the beam.

"That's your man, captain!" Dale said sharply.

Barnes sprang from the chair and in furious rage started to deny his guilt, but Jardin had the handcuffs over his wrists in a twinkling.

"Eastly would have had no reason for returning at midnight to commit a crime that he could have gone through with at 8," Dale was explaining. "That fact made me disregard him as a potential murderer. Mrs. Lochel . . . pardon me for suggesting this, my dear lady . . . would have had no reason for waiting so long to commit the crime if it had been in her mind to do it. Richard Darrell had nothing to gain by seeing Jonathan Hubbard dead, he was interested only in the deed to the property, as valuable if the old man were alive as if he were dead. So he had no motive for murder. Ralph Barnes appeared, from the start, to be the man, but what possible motive could he have? The motive did not develop until the reading of the will . . . it was the size of Jonathan Hubbard's estate! We had every evidence that the old gentleman was miserly about money, it was out of his character, therefore, to believe that he would have gambled it on stocks. But Ralph Barnes brought the evidence of over a million of dollars of losses! They were not Jonathan Hubbard's losses . . . they were the losses of Ralph Barnes, who gambled with money left in his care and, upon the verge of being found out by Jonathan Hubbard used the only recourse at his command to save him from long years in prison! He gambled once more—and once more he lost!"

JACK PICKFORD TO WED AGAIN

SALINAS, Cal., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Jack Pickford, screen actor, today was making preparations for his third trip to the altar, this time with Miss Mary Mulhern, New York stage actress, with whom he filed notice of intention to marry yesterday.

Three days must elapse between the time notice of intention is filed, and a license issued. The couple will be married "somewhere on Monterey Peninsula, presumably at Del Monte Lodge, as soon as they obtain the license.

The groom-to-be, a brother of Mary Pickford, gave his age as 33, and Miss Mulhern said she was 22. Both gave their residences as Hollywood. Pickford's first wife, Olive Thomas, Pittsburgh actress, died in Paris several years ago. He was divorced from his second, Marilyn Miller, also an actress.

Motorists Save Sleeping Family From Fire

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 9.—Passing motorists saved the family of N. E. Evanoff, of Willow Grove, from being burned to death when their home was destroyed by fire early today.

Because of the heat, the family was sleeping in the attic. Motorists, noting smoke coming from the house, aroused the sleepers, who escaped by way of a porch roof.

Boys Build Dam, Depth of River Now Puzzle

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 9.—B. F. Johnson, federal weather observer here, is in a quandary as to how to determine the correct depth of the Shenango River. It is all because some youthful swimmers constructed a dam a short distance below the water works where he makes his soundings. Last week the stage stood at 4.4 feet. Over the week end it started to rise and yesterday it stood at 4.8 feet. Johnson had heard all about the dry spell and was puzzled.

Later a water company employe found that boys had built a dam in the stream and had been gradually adding to its height, causing the water to rise. The result is that the exact depth of the stream cannot be determined.

TREE AND BIKE TESTS GO ON

Pittsburgh's endurance tree sitters and bicycle riders were still in the running today, the tree sitters approaching their six hundredth hour. The relay bicycle riders were on their fourth day.

The tree sitters are Robert Gravely and his brother James and their perch is a tree in the rear of their home at 631 Sickles street. In a nearby tree is their brother Lawrence, sitting with Samuel King, a cousin.

The relay bicycle riders are Danny Ashlander, 13, of 817 Highview street; Albert Slutsky, 13, of Stanton avenue, and Irwin Pittler, 12, of 1021 Jancey street. Each boy rides four hours and rests eight.

Another team of bicycle endurance riders came into being about 20 hours ago when four boys, Roxy Lennif, 13, his brother, John, 15, and their two friends, Mike Kukic, 15, and James Pallatto, 15, commandeered a vacant lot at Tecumseh and Lytle streets, Hazelwood, and began the long grind to gain the record. They also pedal four hours and rest eight.

TURKEY SENDS DOPE TO U. S.

GENEVA, Aug. 9.—(Universal)—Turkey is fast becoming the center of the international narcotic rings which are smuggling drugs out of the county in ton lots. Most of the illegal narcotic shipments are destined for the United States, it was revealed here today.

Secret agents who have visited Turkey declare there are two dope factories near Istanbul (Constantinople) which produce annually 12 tons of narcotics, and this output is augmented by smaller factories. Most of the factories are backed by French, German and Swiss private capital.

The dope is easily obtainable by the smugglers, who export it under the guise of boric acid, dried fruits or other Turkish products.

The agents point out that the quantity produced in Turkey is far in excess of that country's medical needs.

MAKE SAFETY MEET PLANS

A committee of 285, including industrial, business and civic leaders is preparing arrangements to be host to delegates to the nineteenth annual Safety Congress and Exposition, which will be held here the week beginning September 29. "Safety Week" will also be observed in Pittsburgh at that time.

There will be more than 350 speakers during the week including Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd. The William Penn and Port Pitt Hotels, the Syria Mosque and the Pitt Stadium will be used for meetings and dinners. E. T. Whiter, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is general chairman of the Pittsburgh committee on arrangements for the Congress and its allied activities.

Traffic Contest Planned by Club

Prizes totaling $1,720 will be awarded school children and teachers in Allegheny County, exclusive of Pittsburgh, in a traffic contest sponsored by the Pittsburgh Motor Club this fall, provided the county commissioners will aid in financing the project. This was announced yesterday after a conference of Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and E. V. Babcock and John M. Rice, president, and Robert L. Wickline, of the club.

Arnold Man's Body Discovered in Yard

Deputy Coroner Charles Brush, New Kensington, today was investigating the finding of the body of William Wilson, 62, of 1817 Woodmont avenue, Arnold, in the back yard of a home in Second avenue, New Kensington, late last night. The body was found in a sitting posture against a fence, police said. Death was believed due to natural causes, Brush said.

Explosion Wrecks Plant's Powder Unit

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Aug. 9.—The powder mashing unit of the fireworks plant of the Vitale Fireworks Manufacturing Company was destroyed yesterday when materials in the process of mixing exploded. The plant is located some distance west of the city but the explosion was heard plainly here. An employe at work in the plant at the time escaped injury.

Borough Cancels Garbage Contract

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., Aug. 9.—Asserting F. E. Painter had not complied with the terms of the contract under which he operated for the removal of garbage, the borough council canceled the agreement by a unanimous vote. No bond had been furnished, no incinerator provided, and the service in general was unsatisfactory, the council said.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Drug Store Cowboy

"What's yours?" asked Queenie.

"Rye highball," Ed Stockton answered, gravely.

Queenie Perkins looked at him coldly.

"If you really want to make me laugh, Ed, go out and jump off the dock."

"Yeah? Well, then, give me a tall lemon phosphate and try and relax a little. If your old man knew you advised his soda fountain customers to jump off the dock he'd spank his little Queenie."

"If my father had to listen to you asking for a rye highball day in and day out, under the impression that you are the world's greatest wit, he'd probably sock you in the eye and then sell you a black-eye lotion. You are so darned humorous that I expect any day you'll be telling that Grant is dead and you didn't know he was sick."

"What's a-matter with you, Queenie? I thought you was strong for me."

He finished his phosphate and watched her serve two youngsters. She was all smiles to them and she sure gave them fully 15 cents' worth of ice cream for their 10-cent orders.

When Queenie Perkins smiled it was worth seeing.

Mr. Perkins came out from the prescription partition and took down a bottle labeled "Tinct. Fer."

"Hello Ed, how's business?" he asked.

"Oh I ain't bustin' out cryin' about it, Mr. Perkins. I sold two cars yesterday and got my eye on a sure-fire prospect for today, and Boy, when I sell a car I figure to get more profit than you make on a glass of soda."

"I guess you do, Ed," Perkins said.

Competition

Queenie went over when Ed clanked the glass holder on the marble and shouted. "Hey, Queenie, encore."

She snatched the glass and gave him a scowl.

"For Pete's sake, Ed Stockton, can't you find anything better to do than boast to Dad about how much profit you make?"

"It's those darn chain drug stores. People used to come for 10 blocks to trade here with Pa, now there's two of those chain stores in what used to be considered his district."

"Tough on you, Queenie. Suppose you forget it and give yourself a treat tonight by going places with me and steppin' out."

"No thanks."

"Aw, come on, Queenie."

"Can't do it, Ed. I've got to help Dad take account of stock tonight."

"Is he going to sell?"

"I don't know what he'll do."

"Put off that job for tomorrow night—big party on tonight at the A. C."

"No, Ed. Besides, you might get humorous again and make me laugh myself to death."

Queenie flashed him a derisive grin. She just couldn't be sad all the time, even though she was greatly distressed over the way things were going from bad to worse with the drug store, and her father's worries.

This was the day that the "Drug Store Cowboy" came in.

Of course, he wasn't called that at first.

He was an attractive chap, and well dressed. He asked for an ice cream soda and said, "Please."

Queenie served him, aware that he was watching her every move. He took a long while to consume this and he made no attempt to get Queenie in conversation, but he seemed to take an interest in everything that went on in the store, and also he seemed interested in watching the people pass along outside.

"Very good," he said, finally, "another one, Miss, if you please."

He took even longer with the second one and it seemed to Queenie that his eyes were never still for a moment.

Calls Again

He came back the second day and the third day. He always had the same, a chocolate ice cream soda, and he always said "please" and "thank you" and he never seemed to cease watching everything.

Naturally Queenie began to take an interest in him by this time.

"Nice location, here," he said, on the third day.

"Oh, yes, very nice," Queenie agreed. There was no need of telling him that business was rotten.

"Keep you pretty busy?"

Ed Stockton came in just then.

"Hello, Ed, what's your today?" Queenie asked.

"Rye highball," said Ed.

Queenie arranged some glass holders, moved the paper straw holder a trifle, polished a perfectly dry spot on the counter with a white cloth and stared out of the window.

"Hey, Queenie—cherry phosphate," Ed said, loudly.

She mixed it.

"I wish, Ed Stockton," she said, "that you'd get some other funny line instead of the hilarious one about wanting a rye highball."

"Aw, why?"

"Because I don't want our customers to laugh themselves sick over it and then blame our sodas."

"You don't know a joke when you see one, Queenie."

"Well," said Ed, staring coldly at the handsome young man, "guess I'll go back and sell a couple more cars. Might as well be making a few hundred dollars this afternoon as to listen to your smart cracks."

He sauntered out.

The good looking young man came back the next day and talked at length with Queenie. He learned that her father owned the store and she learned that he lived in Rosemont, but had business in the city. She didn't learn what business it was.

Ed came in and after the young man, who, by the way, told Queenie that his name was Bernard Watkins, had gone, Ed said:

"Asks another Drug Store Cowboy," Queenie said, sweetly.

Discuss Marriage

"You got me wrong. I work, I make money, I'm no soda-fountain counter fly—that sap is just an ordinary Drug Store Cowboy."

"What will your rye highball be today, Ed, lemon or cherry phosphate?"

Pa Perkins came out and talked and listened to Ed tell how much money he made that week. That night Pa Perkins told Queenie that Ed was a good chap to tie up to. "He told me he wanted to marry you, Queenie, and you'd do pretty well to do it."

"That sap, Pa!"

"Ed says you're kind of sweet on a feller he calls a Drug Store Cowboy—name of Watkins."

"He's nice. I'm going to a dance with him tonight."

"It looks like I'd got to give up this store, Queenie, and go working at some prescription counter. I've sunk all my years of profit in the last few years since those chain drug stores came in, and I'd like to see you married to some good provider like Ed Stockton."

"And have him ask me for a rye highball every morning when he wanted his coffee? He's a wet smack."

"What's that, a new soda drink?"

"Listen Dad, that's the trouble with you—you won't keep up to date. That's why these chain stores are running you out. A wet smack is a flat tire, a dud, a flop—"

"You mean—er—?"

"An oil can."

Pa Perkins shook his head.

"I'm a druggist—I know my profession thoroughly, but when it comes to selling boiled dinners and encyclopedias and tires and mowing machines and music and radios—and calling it running a drug store, I'm licked."

Mr. Watkins came in just then.

Mr. Perkins talked with him after Queenie introduced him. He talked about drugs and drug stores in the days when one was supposed to buy patent medicines and get any prescription a doctor could guess at, at a drug store.

Mr. Watkins knew a lot about drugs, to Pa Perkins' surprise.

Ed's Proposition

Ed Stockton told Pa Perkins that if he'd sell his store and come into his business he'd make him a partner for a small amount of capital—providing Queenie would marry him.

Queenie wouldn't. She told her father that she was in love with Bernie Watkins.

"Too bad—never thought you'd be taken in by one of these drug store cowboys, Queenie."

Watkins sountered back and watched Mr. Perkins put up some prescriptions. He talked about drugs and the putting up of prescriptions so intelligently that Perkins was greatly surprised.

They talked a long while.

Ed Stockton went to Detroit to see about some car orders. He was gone two weeks. When he got back he went to see Queenie.

The store was closed and men working inside. Mr. Perkins was there and saw him, so he let him in.

"Queenie? Oh, she married Mr. Watkins last week; they are on their honeymoon. Me? I sold out to the chain stores, I'm general manager and purchasing agent of all their drugs at a whale of a salary, Ed," Pa Perkins explained.

"Good. But I can't get over a wise girl like Queenie marrying that sap—The Drug Store Cowboy!"

"He isn't exactly. You see he inherited those chain stores from his father. He owns the whole company, with a hundred and eight stores."

"Oh!" said Ed, shortly.

Washington Monument, Eighth of August, 1930.

To Everybody, Everywhere—

Greetings; How's Tricks? Long time no see. In behalf of International Friendship, I, Horace Frisby, Leader of Men, have thought up a plan whereby I will positively exchange Snap Shots, taken with my Cyclops No. 3 Handy Pocket Camera with the peoples across the sea. This will give others a chance to see, and love, Congressman Frisby informally, and encourage that respect for America which I, for one, am anxious and willing to put over in a Big Way. Some of the snap shots will show the People's Pal at play—wearing the ladies' hats, or dressed like a cowboy or an Indian. Other pictures (perhaps a flashlight or two!) will show Mr. Frisby in reflective mood—wearing his dressing gown, slippers and smoking a pipe as he gazes into the fireplace, book in hand. Just the thing for your Den or Memory Book! Come, King George! Who will be the first to exchange pictures with the Monarch of Democracy?

HORACE B. FRISBY,
Congressman-at-Large.

Q. AND A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Belle—
I am very much disturbed by the playing of a cornet in the apartment below mine. Can you advise any course to take against this nuisance?—Annoyed.

Ans.—The best idea I can think of is for you to develop an ear for MUSIC. That is, if it's possible for one of your unnoticeable mentality to do so. But I'll tell you one thing, unmannerly old busybody, you'd better stop yelling down the air shaft like you been doin'. 'Cause if you don't a certain party is goin' to drop around and wise you up about the consideration punks like you owe to a lady. If I don't make myself clear, just you try disturbing me again tonight.

Comments on Many Things

It is to be hoped the Bureau of Weights and Measures will comply with City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt's advice to prosecute, hereafter, all violators of the law against short weights and measures. They should be prosecuted not only because shopkeepers guilty of that kind of cheating deserve punishment, but also because prosecution will undoubtedly prove a more effective deterrent of such dishonesty than the present policy.

Accused shopkeepers should be prosecuted, furthermore, that opportunity may be afforded them to present a defense, if they have one, before an impartial tribunal. During the past week a number of weights and measures alleged to be fraudulent were seized, as was proper. But they were also summarily destroyed, and there is a question if that should have been done until a magistrate or jury had passed on the case and formally adjudged the devices deficient.

If the bureau's inspectors are to be the sole judges of the accuracy of weights and measures, and are to be permitted to destroy, forthwith, those that they declare are faulty, what is to prevent inspectors anxious to make a name for themselves for their earnestness and energy from denouncing honest weights and measures and then, by promptly destroying the devices, making it impossible to disprove what they say? How is a merchant thus victimized to obtain redress?

To most of us noise is annoying, and the campaign which the Chamber of Commerce has started to free Pittsburgh from din and clatter is accordingly certain to meet with favor. There is some evidence, however, that noise does not produce all the bad effects that are commonly attributed to it. A Pittsburgh psychologist, Dr. Harry M. Johnson, of Mellon Institute, contended in an article entitled "Noise, a Social Problem," in Harper's Magazine of last October, that scientific proof is lacking that noise wrecks health and impairs efficiency. But there is sufficient reason, as Dr. Johnson admits, for getting rid of it in the fact that we do not like it.

It's a little early, isn't it, for the World War veterans to be starting "last man clubs," in imitation of similar organizations of Civil War soldiers? We note that officers of one of the Eightieth Division regiments, inspired by the disbanding of a Civil War "last man club" in Stillwater, Minn., have formed such an association. The Minnesota club endured until 65 years after the war ended. There is no reason for believing that World War veterans will not be equally long-lived; so their "last man clubs" should last until 1983.

Hay fever victims are now beginning to sneeze in earnest. The season for suffering is in full swing, and, according to Dr. C. B. Maits, director of public health, about 10 per cent of the people are afflicted. He says further that the pollen from ragweed is responsible for about 90 per cent of the cases. It is the strongest of arguments for mowing down weeds, and offers all the justification that anyone could desire for vigorous enforcement of the ordinance requiring property owners to keep weeds down. With ragweed out of the way most of the hay fever would soon pass; otherwise it will continue until the weeds are killed by frost.

Hearty congratulations to the graduates of the summer schools of the University of Pittsburgh and Duquesne University. They represent the very highest type of earnest scholarship. It has taken no little zeal for learning to remain in classrooms during the season when most college students are on vacation, enjoying themselves. The extreme heat of recent weeks has certainly been no incentive to engage in hard study. Two graduates at Duquesne merit special praise—Sister Mary Capitolina Heath, who, at the age of 75, has won the degree of bachelor of arts, and Sister Mary Aimee Parrish, who has won the bachelor of science degree at 65.

It is possible, to be sure, to blow either warm or cold with the same breath—to cool the soup, or warm the half frozen fingers—but it is going a little too far to blame the hot wave for a saturnalia of crime in one community and to connect it with the absence of crime in another. A homicide and suicide near Clairton are said to have been due to the perpetrator's becoming crazed by heat, while the heat wave is thanked for the elimination of crime in Franklin, probably on the theory that it has taken all the energy out of criminals. Lincoln Township is found to have no need for a constable, while Ingram calls out its vigilance committee to protect the citizens from burglars.

As a general principle a new road or any other public works should be thrown open to the people as soon as completed. This thought has been suggested by the report that the contractors have finished a three-mile stretch of the Ohio River boulevard, but are unwilling to turn it over to the county until a dispute in regard to the terms of payment has been settled. The public should not be deprived of the use of a public improvement any longer than is necessary.

A citizen of Brentwood who played a number of bird houses on his property reports he now has 15 kinds of birds living on his premises. Fortunate man! He is especially to be envied in his possession of a colony of purple martins. There is something idyllic in the twittering of martins on a summer evening. Well, everyone cannot have birds living at his home, much less 15 kinds. But every resident of Pittsburgh who has time for an occasional walk in the parks may have glimpses now and then of many more. A patient observer should easily be able to find 50 kinds in the course of a year. An ornithologist might find 100 kinds.

The Chamber of Commerce committee headed by C. K. Robinson which is undertaking to free our rivers from industrial pollution without embarrassing the industries has a hard task on its hands. Fortunately an immense amount of study has been given to the matter and an immense amount of valuable data accumulated by prior investigators, notably the Izaak Walton League committee headed by Ralph L. Smith. It may be that there are irreconcilable viewpoints that will prevent these various bodies from getting together; if not, there is an obvious advantage in their joining hands. Cooperating, they might be able to accomplish something that none could do singly.

The wisdom of City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley's policy of shutting off the water supply of persons delinquent in their payments for the service is confirmed by the results. Collections for July show a large increase over those for July, 1929. It may be that those who pay water rents promptly will eventually be relieved of part of the burden of maintaining the water system, since it will be shifted where it belongs, to those who have been shirking their payments. Schooley is to be commended for not shutting off the water of the sick and destitute.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

More Questions

Those 50 bright boys have left West Orange and are now back home biting question marks out of animal crackers.

They were asked some superior interrogations that would have made the delphic oracle do a back flip-flop with four policemen on its chest.

"Bugs" Baer

They were saturated with querulous queries that were as foolish as sneezing into a pound of pepper.

We don't know why Mr. Edison asks questions like that. Possibly because he wants to find out the answer himself.

You know that you can grab yourself a good inquisitive education going around asking busy people questions. Provided they don't first cool you off with a dainty smack on the nose.

How about the value of those 10 acres of farmland in Iowa? What are they worth? Ask an Iowan farmer and he will plow you under for the spring planting.

Ask an Iowan banker and he will ring three burglar alarms and go into a tailspin on one feather.

The truth about farmland in Iowa is that it is worth a lot of golden gravy in normal times. And what oldest inhab remembers those?

When you separate the wheat from the chaff you should not wind up with a handful of applesauce. We know that two and two make four under favorable conditions. We know that the shortest distance between two points depends on the traffic lights.

We know all this because we have certificates of education from 782 colleges and only require seven more diplomas to be a druggist.

But how are we going to get the cash-in-hand value of a second-hand flivver that thinks it has run 5,000 miles? How much of that mileage is in bounces?

And how much of that accrued lateral transportation was in tangents and skids? Tell us that, Mr. Edison and Mr. Ford, and we will figure out the answer on the brass rings on a curtain pole.

We will trot out that ancient Chinese cash register, the abacus, and spin those colored buttons until arithmetic reaches the fusing point.

We will prove that science conquers brute strength except when you are chasing a monkey up a grape vine. But we cannot answer one of those questions plastered on those 50 bright boys in West Orange.

And all we can hope for those 50 bright boys after their trip to West Orange is that they develop no ill effects.

NEW SOURCES OF ENERGY

By Archibald Henderson

If, as scientists now prophesy, the coal supply of the world will be completely exhausted in a few centuries, it behooves the governments of world to initiate exhaustive scientific investigations looking toward the discovery and exploitation of new sources of power. When Sir William Ramsay, in 1910, predicted that Great Britain's supply of coal would be exhausted in one hundred and seventy-five years, his words detonated loudly in the ears of British statesmen.

Since that time various English bodies and commissions have studied many other possible sources of power, which could be made available for commercial purposes. Among the principal possibilities considered are: The rise and fall of the tides, energy sources in wind velocity and the fall of water, the heat contained in the earth's interior, the chemical energy derived from solar rays in vegetation, the hidden energies stored up in matter, and even the orbital motion and rotary spin of the earth.

As yet, scientists are far from being agreed as to the constitution of the interior of the earth or of any star.

But all are agreed that these celestian bodies are giant power plants, mighty atomic dynamos for the generation of radiation. And radiation is a form of cosmic energy, mighty in its effect and universal in its diffusion. It is scarcely to be doubted, although there are numerous fanciful theorists who deny it, that the temperature of the earth steadily increases as we penetrate from the surface toward the interior. In the Village Deep Mine in Johannesburg, South Africa, the circulating air at a depth of 7,000 feet become unbearably hot.

The question naturally arises: How deep shall we be able to sink mine shafts, and enable man, by protective scientific apparel, to mine coal or otherwise labor there? Great accomplishments have already been recorded in that direction, during the past century. Elaborate and efficient machinery, safety devices of many sorts, now enable man to work in the earth's interior at depths hitherto believed to be impossible. Science will doubtless overcome these difficulties in the future, as they arise.

Another century, perhaps, will show mine shafts sunk from five to 10 times the present greatest depths. The internal heat will be needed to supply the energy once furnished by coal. Science will realize the vision of Sir Charles Persons, a shaft 12 miles deep, costing $100,000,000, and releasing enough power through heat to run the industries of the British Empire!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

All day long a baby dances down the aisles of my dark pines. Her tiny body—naked but for the wisp of a sun suit—is rosy gold as an apricot. Her hair is gilded thistledown. And, like thistledown, she whirls and tumbles, darts and drifts atiptoe through the long blue shadows, through the pools of sunlight, up and down the trail.

Sometimes, as she scoots by, a big, blue-eyed man will catch her, toss her to his shoulder, till she squeals with delight. Sometimes, as she passes the mess hall door, a quiet, smiling girl will bend to kiss her or give her cookies and jam. Then off she'll go, bouncing, bubbling, laughing from sunup to star-twinkle. For she's gay, very gay, this little lady of three.

Barbara May Kress they named her when she came. But, with her first chuckling stutter, she renamed herself. What is she called? Looking up at you, all one delighted wiggle from yellow topknot to pink toenail, she'll answer — "BARBARA-MAY-DADDY-MOTHER."

For what did "Kress" mean to her? Kress was a name, but she didn't belong to a name. She belonged to something that was big and strong and kind and wise and warm—something that had two heads and two pairs of arms and legs—but was, nevertheless, just one Something. A Something she sometimes called Daddy and sometimes called Mother, but was really just one Daddy-Mother.

So, out of her deep innocence and deeper wisdom little Barbara May christened herself Daddy-Mother.

Looking at each other across the tiny, shining head, big Walter and big Barbara may have laughed at the quaintness of that title—thinking of themselves as separate people with different notions of life. But to Baby Barbara, joining their hands with her clinging fingers, joining their hearts with her clinging need, they were not separate. They were only Daddy-Mother.

And indeed I suspect that is how we Tall Ones seem to all babies—until we rob them of their faith. We may doubt if marriage has really made us one, but they do not doubt. Why should they?

With their first glance they see us bending above them, linked in one radiance of welcome. And, as the days pass, toddling about us, blinking up at us, they see us as but a moving mountain, walling in their little world—one common source of all kisses and paddlings, all ticklings and cookies and jam.

How slowly it must dawn on them that we are not one to each other. How cruelly their small universe must be wrecked when they see us no longer as Daddy-Mother, but as two separate strangers, staring at each other with angry eyes. WHEN WE STAND APART WHAT HAPPENS TO THEM?. How dreadful the gulf that suddenly yawns beneath their helpless feet.

I suppose I believe in divorces. Stupidly perhaps, I've never been able to see any other way in certain cases. Yet—watching Barbara-May-Daddy-Mother swinging between those linked and loving hands—seeing her dancing through those pools of sunlight—I wonder,

I WONDER IF ANY JOY WE TALL ONES MAY FIND IN FREEDOM IS WORTH THE PRICE WE FORCE THEIR BABY HEARTS TO PAY.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

There was a novelist in New York that never got anything printed, but he worked awful hard writing. When he came to his home town one time he announced that his novel was finished and he was sure going to try it on the publishers. Two years later he came back and somebody says to him: "Say, Fred, what ever happened to that novel about married life that you was going to have printed?"

"Why I sent it in two years ago, and tried it on all the publishers, but they all turned it down. They said it was too indecent."

"Well, why don't you try it again? Ain't the market changed since two years ago?"

"I'll say it has!" says Freddie. "I just tried it on 'em again this summer, and they turned it down again. They said it wasn't indecent enough."

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Within

Without, the palms are lashed to earth,
The gale sweeps down the sand
And shrieks aloft in vicious mirth
Across the cringing land.
How black the sky, how bleak the night
Where furies stalk and roar;
The fishing village shrinks in fright
Along the harried shore!

Within are hearthfire's ardent flame
And candles' valiant glow;
A baby lisps its mother's name
While toddling to and fro;
A kitten plays, a housewife waits
The kettle's steaming spout,
As sea and wind that storm their gates,
Unheeded, wail without.

Without the house where being dwells
An angry world may rave;
But yet within love weaves its spells,
Its charms that bless and save.
Storm may sometimes the stars obscure,
But trust and faith, alight,
Will keep the house of life secure
Against encroaching night.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

By selective breeding, we should be able to produce a stock in which no harmful sexlinked recessives were present; and in this the males should be just as resistant as the females.

There are some further interesting consequences of this lesser resistance of the human male. For one thing, the percentage of female children goes slightly up with the mother's age and the number of her pregnancies.

H. G. Wells

This, it seems, is not due to any change in the eggs she produces, but is a direct consequence of the fact that the internal environment provided by the mother to her unborn children becomes less favorable with age and previous child-bearing and the males, being less resistant, suffer more.

There are more still-births and more miscarriages, a high percentage of which are of males, and so the proportion of female children rises.

Indeed, whatever favors prenatal health and successful childbirth causes a rise in the proportion of boys. In every country legitimate children show a higher male percentage than illegitimate, because they are better looked after before and at birth.

There has long been a legend that the male birth ratio rises markedly in war time. It does rise, as the statistics of the great war show, but only to the tune of less than 1 per cent, and this is not due to deprivation, as used to be supposed, since it did not occur in any neutral countries, even those where the blockade was causing great hardships.

It appears, on the contrary, to be due to more favorable prenatal conditions. It only occurred where a great body of the male population was away at the front, save for rare leaves, and this, it seems, meant for a number of women a freedom from the sexual demands of their husbands that was favorable to a slightly higher survival of their unborn children, and so a slightly increased male ratio.

But even when all differences in the resistance of males and females are allowed for we do not always find exact equality. In most white races the number of boy babies born alive for every hundred girls lies between 101 and 108, and if we take the still-births and the pre-natal deaths into account we find that the proportion of male to female conceptions must be about 120 to 100.

This preponderance of males at conception can only be accounted for by some advantage possessed by Y-bearing sperms which enable them to fertilize more eggs than their X-bearing brethren.

Presumably the male producers have greater powers of endurance than the female producers and can better withstand the arduous journey up the uterus and oviducts.

We may guess from the statistics that for every six male producers only five female producers get to the top of the oviduct; that six out of every 11 among the millions that lose themselves and perish on the way are female producers.

The machinery of chromosome-distribution inevitably produces a precise quality of male producers and female producer sperms. The female producers are apparently handicapped in some way and a high male conception ratio is the consequence.

But the males are constitutionally less resistant; and so the preponderance of males is gradually reduced and may even turn into a preponderance of females.

Conditions within uterus and oviduct may change the handicap on the female producers, and so alter the sex-ratio at conception. Favorable conditions before and after birth will prevent the percentage of males declining so rapidly.

At present in England at least one out of every five fertilized eggs dies before birth; over three per cent more die at birth; yet another fifteen per cent or so in the first year of life—a wastage of nearly forty per cent of all conceptions before one year old.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

BERLIN.—The theater as we know it in New York does not exist in Berlin. Here they take the theater seriously and consequently it is aloof, Artistic. The German revue producer cannot infuse the pagan fervor or erotic pace of Earl Carroll into girl and music shows. They are like local food—heavy.

Shakespearian and Shavian plays are the chief dramatic fare and Max Reinhardt is Berlin's entrepreneur extraordinary. Whenever this temperamental little man with the sad eyes threatens—and he does often—to move to Munich or Vienna, the city is gripped by hysteria. Figuratively, it kneels in supplication.

"Burr-lean" has only two music halls—the Scala and Wintergarden. The most discussed frivolous production of the moment is "Die Wunderbar" at the Renaissance Theater, in the fashionable Charlottenburg, a new playhouse in a striking interpretation of the renaissance.

We, well, somebody in the party did, paid $10 each for second row seats. The setting is a smart night club—"The Wonder Bar"—with a tiny circular dance floor in the theater's center. There is no curtain and paid seat holders become a part of the play. It provides a skillful intimacy I have never seen accomplished.

Members of the cast arrive through the front entrance and are seated at tables by the head waiter. They stop at your table side to chat or borrow a light. The waiter captain who escorted us to our chairs later proved to be the best dancer on the bill and I like a cap had tipped him a mark.

The illusion is so pronounced you suspect everybody of being in the cast. I almost flirted with my wife. Even the stage carriage starter at "Die Wunderbar" calls your taxi when you reach the curb after the play. It was a fragile piece, superbly performed, with a plot that doesn't matter.

The cast was Viennese and the music "whistly." Berlin theatergoers seldom dress in evening clothes. That is true in cafes. So far I have not seen a dinner suit or evening gown. While there are picture palaces, the cinema has not achieved the popularity it has in America.

Berlin beggars flock to an American like minnows to a crumb. A bare-headed student type with a Byronic collar and a long face like Julius Tannen thrust his head into the taxi today and mumbled dolefully: "I'm a poor and hungry man. It is hard to find work in Germany." Some ruffian in a uniform rushed out from a building and gave him an undeserved shove that sent him flying into the middle of Unter den Linden. I got out and gave the beggar a two mark piece. And afterward I wondered if it was all a frameup.

Will Hogg's handling of German is a repeated source of amazement — a combination of broken English and menu French that is the berries. Today he wanted a dill pickle, gave the poodle-legged waiter a sour look and got it. * * *

Police wear khaki coats, black, silver helmets and white gloves. In my best German I inquired of one today: "Welches ist der Weg nach Jagerstrausse, bitte?" He replied in excellent English: "Two blocks ahead and turn right." And you could have lit a stogie off my right cheek. Everybody in Berlin seems to speak English with a British accent.

Streets are dotted with hatless youths carrying leather brief cases. I counted a hundred in an hour. They carry them—I am unable to learn why—in the manner of a fop swinging a cane. They may contain nothing or anything from an old newspaper to a setting of eggs. The flapper carries a huge handbag of bright hue. She looks ready for a sudden journey. And maybe is.

There are no slums in Berlin. I mean like those airless, sunless hideaways found behind Les Halles in Paris and Limehouse in London. I drove through the poorest and toughest district around Schlesischer Bahnof and it was as peaceful and opulent as Flushing, New York. But a city without slums is to me too formal.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You have made some summer resort friends.

When you parted they asked you to "come" and see them sometime.

That sounded to you as if they were inviting you to visit them, but to them it is likely it was no more than a farewell courtesy.

When less desirable persons were present and the brief vacation period of time was taken into consideration you were taken on to help while away time.

But in town where more important persons are their intimate friends you don't count and so if you understand it you may devoid heartaches.

You are not especially desirable as a friend—you are looking for that sort.

Summer romances are amusing if you don't take them too seriously.

When you have schooled yourself to look the matter straight in the face from the other fellow's point of view you can still enjoy yourself and expect less.

As a play companion you may be all right—as an associate, that may be different to them.
